Commencement Week

Better liked than its predecessors on account of its charming young ladies and the good fellowship of its men, the Class of 1907 ended an eventful career in what may be termed a "blaze of glory." In this "blaze" many things flicker before our eyes. Sometimes the Surkuss is foremost, then again the Senior-Faculty baseball game and Dr. James' phenomenal long distance catching. If the blaze is to be described it must be through the building and kindling processes. Who can tell by looking, however intently, at a fire, just what substances made the burning possible? So it is with the 1907 Commencement; therefore, let us examine it in detail.

The following program of events appeared in Student Life, June 12, 1907. (The first item is doubtless an error of the Editor's, for the "happening" was meant to have been kept dark. Great indignation was expressed by W. A. G. at the time, on account of the "tone" it gave our paper. Burke apologized—later.)

Notices of the Week

Thursday, June 13—Senior Electrical Engineers' Banquet at Faust's.
Friday, June 14—Senior Class Canoe Trip, Luncheon at Paddle and Saddle Club.
Saturday, June 15—Senior-Faculty Baseball Game at the Stadium, 10 a. m. Reunion of Class of 1905 at the British Pavilion at 1 p. m. Prof. and Mrs. Woodward's Lawn Party to the Senior Class from 5 to 7 p. m.
Monday, June 17—Chancellor and Mrs. Chaplin's Reception to Senior Class at the British Pavilion at 5 p. m. Commencement Concert and Entertainment at British Pavilion at 8 p. m.
Tuesday, June 18—Senior Class Picture, 10 a.m. Luncheon to Ladies of the Senior Class at 1 p.m. Senior Class Banquet at Commons, 7 p.m.
Wednesday, June 19—Senior Pilgrimage, Start will be made from University Hall, 10 a.m. Planting of Class Tree, 2 p.m. Class Day Exercises, 3 p.m. Class Play, "Three to One," 8:15 p.m. at Pavilion.
Thursday, June 20—Commencement Exercises, 10 a.m. Alumni Banquet in Gymnasium at 1 p.m. Senior "Prom" at the Pavilion at 8:15 p.m.

The E. E. Banquet and the Class Canoe Trip were very exclusive affairs—no place for a Hatchet representative there. Only meager details could be gathered from the lucky ones. An air of mystery surrounds this part of the program. In passing we shall say that many 60,000 volt speeches were made by E. E's. who are now running on 60 per 1/60 cycle.

Suppose we talk about the more interesting events that we saw, and all enjoyed. Read below, Fritz Bock's account of that most entertaining and laughable "athletic" contest—The Senior-Faculty Baseball Game.

All flushed with victory, the Senior Team, accompanied by others of minor importance repaired to Prof. Woodward's home, where they enjoyed a Lawn Party to its fullest extent, i.e. seven P.M. (It has been unkindly insinuated that Patton enjoyed everything to his fullest extent, and "that's goin' some.") Everyone had a dandy time and many were the flattering remarks made concerning Dean Woodward's hospitality.
Senior Week Post-Season Championship.

In as much as the game had been postponed from morning to afternoon, excitement in the ranks of Profs. and students had risen to fever heat. Rooters and sports who had bet on the result were in a most nerve-racking condition—the former because their pleasure had been delayed, and the latter on account of the fact that they had to win in order to have car fare for the lawn party that evening. Those lucky ones who were going to escort fair ladies well nigh had the rabbies before time for changing money arrived. Just picture the pitiful plight of those reckless Seniors, had the Faculty won! Oh, me, oh, my! But such was not the case. However, we are getting ahead of our story.

About three o'clock, when human endurance in the way of expectation was a thing of the past, the much heralded and dignified teams began playing. Just as the New York papers had maintained for a fortnight, the Faculty, with Everhardt in the box, made life miserable for the Seniors.

Rodenberg, of the 'Varsity, began catching for the Faculty, but was relegated to the bench upon Dr. James' arrival. Some way or other, the Doctor got Pascal and Varignon or some other old guy all balled up and could not determine the direction of the pitcher's curves. Under these conditions some of the curves approached the catcher's glove as a limit, but this was the extreme limit and did not occur often—some of them tried for infinity, but nearly all landed in the back stop. One thing Dr. James did know, however—that all the curves were concave downward. This was probably the reason why he did not get up in the air while playing.

Prof. Langsdorf shocked the Seniors and electrified the spectators by his glowing enthusiasm and his burning desire to shine. Many a short circuit of the bases can be placed to his credit, i.e. the runner did not reach first before being put out. The Prof. is a great stickler for justice and refused to be bullied by the umpire.

Prof. Penn and Mr. Starbird upheld their Department's reputation. They put all kinds of English on the ball—reverse, 23 and bad. Reverse English was a new phase of University life in connection with baseball—heretofore Reverse had been applied to Freshmen thens courses only.

Those of the audience who were quiet and unassuming in manner became much flustered that language of a slang and uncouth nature seemed to be used by the dignified ones with the utmost sang froid. Such expressions as, "Smack it on the nose, Penn," "Spike that guinea," and "Slide, cove—slide," were bandied back and forth just as if ordinary hard guys were combating.
Prof. Lovejoy, seated under an umbrella, in center field, was easily the most picturesque object in or about the game. Everyone knew that Mr. Lovejoy had unique ideas, but this one took the money without dissenting vote.

The game was replete with sensational plays and hair-raising slides to bases. Viewed from an impartial standpoint it was indeed a grand display of nerve and endurance (on the spectators' parts.) "I and Myron Townsend" considered the clash, next to the Fresh-Soph "go-round," about the best ever.

The following line-up and account of the game was compiled by the "Athletic" Editor:

Double plays, Smith and Langsdorf; Souther and Lamar; Richardson, Souther and Lamar were the stars for the winners, while James and Blanchard starred for the sluggers. Although not playing in usual form, James, was easily the star performer of both nines, having only fifteen errors to his credit.

A unique feature of the game was the introduction of sun protectors (usually called parasols) by the faculty outfielders. The game was called in the seventh inning on account of tiredness.
The next day was Sunday. Everyone rested from his or her labors, except Goodbar and Souther, who went to church.

On Monday, Chancellor and Mrs. Chaplin received at the British Pavilion. The Chancellor's reception, always looked forward to with such eagerness, turned out to be quite a stately, but enjoyable affair. Judging by the noise heard by passers-by on Skinker, there must have been some conversation. A rumor even got afloat that certain gentlemanly fussers, lured by the sassy twinkle of a co-ed's eye, grew so bold that they did some mighty neat "dart-work." Of course, we all swallowed this with a grain of salt and merely remarked that someone was doing spite work. Oh, those co-eds!

Misses Johnston, Randall and Woodward, and Messrs. Miller, Taylor and Faulkner are indeed to be complimented on the beautiful manner in which they rendered their respective solos. The audience and University students as a whole were delighted to know that such talent had existed in their very midst without them even suspecting the fact. All are looking forward impatiently to the next treat.

As part two of the program, "That Rascal Pat" was presented by Thyrsus. Mr. Souther made a great hit as "Pat," and kept the audience in an uproar. Others of the cast did very well, as was shown by the generous applause they received.

Nothing startling happened at the Senior Banquet at Commons next evening. Speeches were made by the officers and leaders of the Class. Officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Promptly at 10 a. m., Wednesday, the Pilgrimage started from the Shrine of Minerva—University Hall. Mr. Goodbar started the ball to rolling by a very witty and reminiscent speech. In turn the class visited the Shrines of Terminus (Cupples I), Prometheus (Busch), Cadmus (Library), Vulcan (Cupples II), Aeolus (Eads Hall), Mercury (Gymnasium) and Bacchus (Commons Hall), where they were entertained in order by appropriate and well chosen remarks. The orators who did so well at the respective Shrines are, Miss Patterson, and Messrs. Hendrich, Graham, Stevens, Richardson, Bryan, English and Ruebel. After the long journey a dainty luncheon was enjoyed at Commons.

The Class Tree Planting took place at 2 p. m. Addresses were made by Prof. Woodward and Pres. Evans.

Owing to Mr. Evans' absence, Mr. Goodbar made the opening address for the afternoon tent exercises. He explained the custom which started the Class Day Exercises, and showed how this custom would, in time, become a tradition of the University. Miss Coulter read the Class Poem, a beautiful and scholarly composition. 1907 in Retrospect by Mr. Souther and 1907 in Prospect, by Miss Gruner, were enjoyed greatly. The compositions were humorous and interesting to all—what's more, they were to the point. Mr. Burke presented a gift to each member of the Class. This little gift, tendered with such entertaining remarks by the oily tongued Dramatic Star, was really a lemon of the slightly sugared variety—the weakness or hobby of each '07er was aired publicly. E'en though the fair recipients sometimes ill concealed a reproachful flutter of the eyelid ("Oh, Mr. Burke, how could you?") or the huskies an evil leer, everything was lovely and the convulsed audience had much ado to prevent side-splitting. Here ended the frivolous and gay part of the week. Next morning everyone was dignity personified. They graduated.

SENIOR PROM.

The day had been hot and full of excitement—the night was cool and peaceful. Nearly everyone had taken advantage, during the afternoon, of an opportunity offered for securing beauty sleep. As a consequence, the girls looked prettier than ever before and the men were positively handsome.

About nine o'clock beautiful strains of music floated out on the still night air, calling dancers from their promenades of the grounds back to the pavilion. The '07 Prom was on! From this time until the music had been hushed after the last dance, everyone had such a time as will never be forgotten. It was with a feeling of regret that the men allowed Joke to chase them out of the hat room when all was over. The ears of that lucky Prom Committee surely hummed on account of the many tributes to their beautiful management of the dance and the dandy time they were instrumental in showing all present.

May the Goddess of Good Fortune ever smile kindly on the members of 1907, Washington University!
