CLASS HISTORY

The Law School class of '09 has been exceedingly fortunate in that it has retained the vast majority of men which made up the class last year, in addition to a very fair number of new Solons.

We do not feel in the least abashed in stating that we are by far the best class that Washington University has turned out or will turn out of any of its departments in years to come. At first blush this would seem, no doubt, a rather rash statement to the uninformed. However, to one well informed this would not appear absurd. If there is now existing any one who does not believe in, and is not firmly impressed with the superiority of the Law School class of '09 by the foregoing * demonstration and argument he will undoubtedly be convinced as to the truth of the same by seeing Joe, to whom we can refer him with utmost confidence.

*Note “demonstration and argument” as used with reference to the foregoing.

Junior Class History

In reviewing the history of a Freshman Class, we must always bear in mind the old proverb, that seems to never grow ancient or less forcible, especially in the eyes of an upper-classman, namely: "The least said about a Freshie the better." I say that it must be borne in mind, since, of course, the last thing we wish to do is to offend the great and mighty Senior and Middle Year men.

However, it must also be taken into consideration that we are not exactly Freshmen. And why? In the first place, our real name and the title under which we are listed in the catalogue is "Juniors," which it must be admitted, uplifts and exalts, far beyond the realm of Freshiedom. In the next place the men that entered the first year class on the 26th day of September, last, were all men of vast learning and wide experience, men gathered from all quarters of the globe; men who represented the fairest and best of many countries; to whom, I say, the application of the term "Fresh" would be an absurd and ridiculous misnomer. The Middle's all agree.

As for the actual history of the Class as a whole, there is not much to tell. The one particular feature of the Law School is that you go down twice a day, recite and go home or occasionally spend a few passing moments in the library.

Of course, I could go on to write with what a terrific pounding in the left diaphragm and with what a blurriness of vision we entered upon our first exam.—Elementary Law—but that would be telling tales out of school, and besides the average which was higher than that of any preceding class, shows that there was really no need of fear, and last, but not least, take the words of the Deans when he said: "Without a doubt the class of 1910 is the most promising class that has ever entered my school." So, here's to the fulfillment of the promise!
