At the close of the 1912 season, prospects for as good a team for this year as last, seemed dim. The entire backfield and a lineman had been graduated and one of the regular ends had dropped out of the University, necessitating the developing of six players for regular positions.

By the first game, however, this had been accomplished and Shurtleff was defeated in a slow but well played game, showing plenty of fumbles and an absence of team work. By the following Saturday these defects had been eliminated and Washington played by far the best game of the season; the line charged uniformly, opened up holes for the backfield and broke up Illinois' plays before they were well under way. The backfield played well together, gave their teammates good interference and ran back punts better than the Illinois backs. In other words the team outplayed Illinois and, but for breaks in luck and lack of judgment at times, should have won the game. Then came the game with Westminster, when it reached the highest point of its development, plays were executed perfectly, the ball handled with an entire absence of fumbles and the defensive play invincible.

The Rolla game showed the first backward step; the players seemed to have lost the vigor and aggressiveness of former games and played sluggish football; this was thought to be a temporary relapse or due to an "off day," and indeed this seemed to be a fact until the last quarter of the Drake game, when, leading by the score of 13-12, the team seemed suddenly to go to pieces and become disorganized. As Drake was a much heavier and better conditioned team, it was a case of wearing down a team without capable substitutes to replace the tired men.

Drury was defeated in a game in which the ends seemed unable to break up the forward pass. Then came Missouri, the team we would rather beat than all the rest on our schedule. Leaving St. Louis, with the hope, not so much of winning but of holding them to a small score, Washington was swept off its feet in the first few minutes of play and in the first half was outplayed at every angle. Coming back strong in the second half, it was able to prevent further scoring. The one bright and shining light in this game was Hetlage. Many pounds lighter than the lightest of Missouri’s men, he played with such gameness that, although forced to take time out on several occasions, he played through the entire game and time and time again brought the Missouri rooters to their feet by stopping Knoble, their star player.

As in the Illinois game, the breaks went against us and Arkansas won the last game of the season by the score of 13-7.

Of the individual players, it can be said that the four were Capt. Vollmar and McCarthy in the line and Moreell and Milford in the backfield. These men played consistently good football during the entire season and outplayed their opponents on almost every occasion. Capt. Vollmar showed wonderful defensive ability and broke through and stopped plays time and again; he was fast for his weight and often got down the field with the ends on a punt or kick-off. McCarthy seemed to instinctively know where the opponents’ plays would be directed and would always be there to break it up. He never made a bad pass and never allowed the opposing center to get the jump on him. Moreell was the best full-back Washington has had in years; he was the most consistent player on the team and could always be relied upon to make the required number of yards on the last down; he had the knack of running low and picking his holes through the line. Milford was an excellent defensive man and a hard line plunger; he went through the Drake and Missouri lines for five and ten yards at a time.

The regular guards were Barnes and Poole, though Green would have supplanted one of them had he not been injured early in the season. Of the three, Green was the more aggressive and the quicker, while the other two were on par and both played a steady game. Nelson, who played the opposite tackle from Capt. Vollmar did not reach his true form during the entire season, though he played brilliantly in the Illinois game.

Prensky and Scherer were the 'varsity ends. Both were fast men down the field on a punt, but allowed themselves to be too easily blocked by the enemy's backs. Prensky was a good tackler, but Scherer seemed to be out of place at end and did not have the faculty of leaving his feet when hitting a man; he would have been a star at tackle or guard. Hetlage, though developed late in the season, was the best end of the three; he was fast, aggressive and a sure tackler.

At quarter back, Hardaway showed ability at directing the team and was the hardest tackler on the team; no man ever got by him when he stood between him and the goal.

Potthoff, who, at the beginning of the season, promised to be the star of the team, seemed to become overtrained and slowed down, but nevertheless was a brilliant player and a strong open field runner.
Of the substitutes, Hetlage, Ross, Weir and Hudler were the best. Ross was an excellent punter and a fast man, but as a quarterback he was inclined to slow the team up by hesitating in calling the signals. Weir was a good sub-center and Hudler a good man to put in at either end or halfback. All four of these men will be with us next year and should give a good account of themselves.

Ranson and Steward, who played in several games, must not be overlooked. Ranson, though new at football, shows promise of being one of the coming star linemen, and, in fact, seems to be a good man to take Vollmar's place. He played so hard in the Missouri game that he had to be assisted off the field. Steward should be heard from next year and should fill in the hole left by McCarthy.

Souther, Bryan, Wiechert, Long and Bernard, though light, were hard workers and did a great deal toward building up the team by coming out every night and "scrubbing" against the 'varsity.

STARTING the season with but two of last year's letter Basketball men and a limited supply of able substitutes, the Washington team finished its schedule in a fashion unlike championship style only in percentage.

It cannot be said that Washington was not well represented in the Missouri Valley Conference, for Big Chief Cayou had his men trained to play at top speed and only weight and inexperience kept them from gaining more distinction. When we consider losing to Kansas by a single point and by two lone points to Missouri, we wonder why Dame Fortune could not have boosted us one more basket, thereby rewarding our team for their hard and consistent work. Then, again, Coach Cayou had his troubles in picking a final team. Berryhill’s absence at the first of the season and the exclusion of two good candidates as a consequence of the mid-year exams caused considerable delay in selecting the five men.

In spite of these handicaps, the first game of the season, played with Central Wesleyan, was easily won. This game was simply one of practice and most everyone on the squad was given a show in the fray. The following week the Ames team showed up at our gymnasium and our team took two games from them in handy fashion. From the style of play showed in these games much was expected from the locals.

Next came Shurtleff, and we defeated them one Saturday as a brush up for the trip, the team leaving for Columbia the following Wednesday morning. That night Washington met her first defeat. The following evening a like result was obtained but at the hands of men outweighing us 25 pounds per man. In both these games, the team had trouble in keeping their feet on the slippery floor and at the same time playing a game of misnamed football. The following two nights, Kansas put over the third and fourth defeat for the Pikers. In the first game, Berryhill was crippled and due to the fact that the remaining men had not played together previous to the trip, Coach Cayou was forced to try several combinations which resulted disastrously in the last game. Here the team felt that they had been beaten fairly and squarely, but returned home fully determined to show Kansas and Missouri some basketball at home.

After a week’s rest, Missouri arrived. In two fast and brilliant contests they barely won the edge in each game. The following week, Kansas, by some exceptionally brilliant team work, won the first game by an advantage of one point, while the second was in our favor until the middle of the second half. So we ended the schedule, not discouraged but proud that our team held its own at the very end with the odds against them.

The following men deserve credit for their hard, consistent work on the squad, e.g. Captain Gray, Maenner, Chivvis, Lacey, Donk, Modisette, Scherer, Berryhill, Jackson and Ross. Capt. Gray was noted for his speed and aggressiveness and his ability in taking the ball up the field. Also, he and Donk, who ably filled the other guard position, followed their men closely, intercepting many a pass. Lacey, the midget of the team, proved to be an A No. 1 utility man. His work at guard, hindered as it was by his lack of height, was exceptionally good, while his ability at forward made other men hustle to guard him. His quickness at recovering the ball and his hard playing won for him the popularity of every audience. Maenner's work at forward showed him as a hard and consistent worker and anyone could pick Ted out as a veteran at the game. The other forward position was filled by Chivvis, Berryhill and Jackson successively, they dividing honors about equally. Chivvis played the greater part of the season as the regular forward and it was he who threw seven baskets in the second half of the first Kansas game. "Minute-and-a-half" Berryhill, due to his lateness in reporting for the team, his sprained ankle, and his broken rib, was kept from repeating his record of last year, although he, as well as Jackson, played the forward position remarkably well. At center, Modisette proved a tower of strength. He invariably got the jump off and his work on the field was exceptional for the first year in Varsity circles. His substitute, Scherer, was always ready and capable, but, like Ross, was seldom used, except at the end of the game, and did not have as many chances to show his real ability.

At the close of the season, Maenner was elected captain for the next year and to him we wish the best results for the 1914 season.

Review of the 1912 Track Season

With no baseball for the Spring of 1912, a great effort was made to re-establish track work as a major sport at Washington. Coach Cayou found great difficulty, however, in getting men to try out and did not have a large number from which to pick his team. He developed a good relay team and some of the men showed promising signs of developing into sprinters while Nelson and Lambert were already developed in previous work.

At the Relay Carnival held at Des Moines, April 20, 1912, we were represented by a team composed of Nipher, Moreell, Gray, Maenner and Winfree, (substitute). This team won second place in the 880 yard race which is quite worthy of praise since most of the schools of the Big Eight Conference were represented by teams at this meet. In the mile relay, we were running a strong third when a Kansas runner directly in front of Moreell stumbled and fell, tripping “Big Ben” and costing us a good chance to place in this event.

The Annual Field Day served more as a tryout for the Drake Meet than as a real field day. On May 4, 1912, Drake met us on Francis Field in a dual meet and carried away the honors to the tune of 64 ½ to 44 ½. Paul Nelson was our individual star scoring 13 of our points. He won first place in the high jump and the shot put, and took second in the discus throw. As usual, Lambert took the pole vault, doing 11 feet without serious competition. Our relay team easily won the relay race establishing a record for Washington of 3 minutes and 33 seconds.

All of the men except Nipher and Lambert are returned this year and, with the experience they have had supplemented by good coaching, should develop still further this year.

1912 Tennis Season

The 1912 Tennis season showed that Washington continues to send out some of the best men in the Missouri Valley Conference to compete for laurels under her name. The excellent work of Brodix and Adkins at the Conference Tournament at Columbia brought back championship honors for us at the expense of four competing Universities. They won the doubles championship handily from the strong Kansas team and captured first place with 9 points to Missouri's 6, the nearest competitor. In the singles, Brodix worked his way out to the finals, but was defeated by Cannon of Missouri, the state Champion, who had also defeated Adkins in the previous round after hard fighting.

The local Annual Tournament was quite successful, thirty-six men contesting in it. Hoerr took the final from Brodix, 6-0, 6-2, 6-4, after the latter had won two very stiff matches from Adkins and Gallenkamp. Stifel and Lionberger also showed good form, the latter getting into the semi-finals.

Although we have lost Adkins, one of the best men in the Valley when he gave his attention and time to the game, we have left men who are fully capable of upholding Washington's name in the Valley, and it is to be hoped they will have a chance at schools outside the Conference this season.

Drosten Cup Series

Won by the Freshmen (1915)

The Drosten Cup series, which is a series of contests each year between the Freshman and Sophomore classes, was won in the Spring of 1912 by the class of 1915—then Freshmen. By their victories in the three departments of sport—basketball, baseball and track—the winners gained the privilege of having their numerals engraved on the Drosten Cup which is kept in Francis Gymnasium.

A tie was the result of the football game which the 1914 men wanted to continue until one side or the other scored. The Freshmen would not consent, however. In basketball, the 1915 men found little trouble in taking two out of three games, while in baseball only two games were necessary to determine their supremacy. In the field meet, the first-year men were clearly the victors, winning by a score of 63 to 45.
GIRL'S
ATHLETICS

[165]
ATHLETICS, among the women, are, at present, composed of three branches: Gymnasium, which includes floor-work, fencing, and aesthetic dancing, Basketball, and Tennis.

In the gymnasium work, there is an Annual Interclass Indoor Meet held each Spring. In basketball, the four class teams compete with each other in a series of games, the winning team having its numerals engraved on the Association Basketball Cup. For the further honor of being proclaimed Champions of the University, however, the winning team must play the post graduate and the Art school teams. With the advent of Spring, indoor athletics are abandoned and practice for the Tennis Tournament begins. The winner of the tournament has her name engraved upon the handsome Brookings Cup. There is also a Class Tennis Tournament, the winners of which are awarded medals.*

At the close of each season the Athletic Association gives a banquet which all the members are expected to attend.
