Thyrsus Review

N writing a review of Thyrsus and its accomplishments during the past year, it might be well to begin with the alibi so popular at the present time—on account of the war—etc. But enough of that for the time being.

For the annual performance, Thyrsus chose "The Truth" by Clyde Fitch, which was presented at the Victoria Theatre, April 19th. "The Truth" offered many opportunities for dramatic ability which were very well handled by the cast which could be called an all-star cast. The character of the untruthful wife, portrayed by Alice Johann and of her husband, portrayed by Wyllis Bliss, were exceptionally well done.

With the opening of the University in the fall, Thyrsus was obliged to start from the ground up. The entire executive staff of the previous year had left and not returned. It was therefore necessary to form an organization of those who had taken no active part in the management of the society previously. Thyrsus also gave up its theatre in Cupples 2 to the Red Cross Society to be used as a workshop. Thyrsus admittedly began the 1917-18 season under very unfavorable circumstances. However, the depleted ranks were soon filled from the Freshman and Sophomore classes. Some very good actors in embryo were obtained.

The first monthly performance of Thyrsus was presented in the auditorium of Mary Institute on December 17. Three one-act plays were given, "The Rising of the Moon," "The Twelve-Pound Look" and "Between the Soup and the Savoury." Though the plays were all of the lighter order and offered no real dramatic moments, the casts handled them admirably before a very appreciative audience.

The society has made an innovation in regard to the monthly business meetings. At each meeting some one prominent in theatrical work either of St. Louis or with some visiting company, is invited to address the club on some subject bearing on the stage and the drama. This has greatly increased the interest of the members in the organization as well as proving very instructive.

In spite of the war and other unfavorable circumstances, Thyrsus has passed through a very successful year and shows fine promise of even further improvement.

Glee and Mandolin Clubs' Trip
Season 1918

December 30th, the Glee and Mandolin Clubs again arranged their mandolins and suit cases so that they would not fall upon some budding genius. The census taking produced the usual results, owing to repeaters and slackers. However, when the train gave the lurch indicating departure, no one or anything had been left behind except a comb and a toothbrush or two.

The concert at Sikeston was very successful in all respect in spite of the fact that the town "newspaper" referred to them as the "Glee and Musical Clubs." Having been told that a dance in their honor was to be given after the performance at the City Club, the G. & M. men set out for the said club. It was finally found and lighted. The dance was delightful and the wading back to the Pullman was a fitting end to a perfect day.

Memphis, the next stop, boasted a swimming pool. The whole gang set out for the natatorium in spite of the fact that it was only Tuesday. To advertise the concert the banjo quintet and the glee club gave several sample performances. The afternoon at Memphis was whiled away in two lower boxes viewing a show called "Pretty Baby." The dance after the performance at the Tennessee Club was well worth attending.

When the Glee and Mandolin men talk about Paducah, they skim over the concert and rave about the Rotary Club dance—not because the concert was not good, but because the dance was better. A few dances with the Paducah Queens, cream of the South, and past and future Locks and Proms were forgotten. The concert at the Kentucky Theater in Paducah was very well given and very much appreciated.

The concert given at the town of Jackson was not quite up to the usual standard, due to the fact that the village cut-ups are allowed to run about loose. The town wits pulled the old gallery stuff.

The barber at Marion, Ill., who charged twenty cents for a shave will be remembered long after the rest of the trip is forgotten. Also the board of censorship whose approval of the performance was required as the concert was given in a church. The town people gave the men a very nice dance, but as it was the last night of the trip and the Sacred rites of Whiffletree were to be administered, the thoughts of dancing were abandoned early for more serious things. The Senior Whiffletrees, in order to throw the uninitiated off their guard, waited until all had retired before starting the ceremonies. The old men all procured their sacred emblems (slippers, coat hangers, razor strops) and formed a line on each side of the aisle. The neophytes then were persuaded to go from one end of the car to the other. Lueder and Higgins were said to have been initiated most thoroughly. However, that is a mooted point among the newest Whiffletrees. In conclusion, the Glee and Mandolin Clubs did both the University and themselves honor on their last trip.

Glee and Mandolin Clubs’ Concert

The date of the Glee and Mandolin Clubs’ Concert, January 11, was the coldest night in the memory of man. However, the crowd that braved the cold and defied pneumonia to attend was comparatively large. Comparatively is used in reference to the weather and not the hall, for the audience was lost in the Odeon, which might even be called large for its size. The size of the crowd and the size of the hall caused a very demoralizing echo.

The work of the Glee Club ensemble was open to one criticism only—it appeared on the program in only three numbers, “Wayfaring Men,” by Jungst; “Doan Ye Cry, Ma Honey,” by Noll; and “On the Sea,” by Dudley Buck. The Mandolin Club in “Butterfly,” by Andrée; “Manzannelo,” by Robyn; and “Serenade,” by Drigo, also appeared to advantage, but they lacked the volume and technique of former years. The Banjo Quintet with their ragtime selections were encored several times. The quartet, composed of new men, performed very creditably. According to the critic, they had the sweetest voices he had heard at Washington. Messrs. Stein and Higgins presented a blackface dialogue. Orson Curtis, who was billed for the early part of the program, did not appear until late, caused by the East St. Louis car system. However, his solo was well worth waiting for. William Koenig gave a violin solo. Robert Harlan, Harry Lauder, II, was better than last year, if that is possible.

The clubs put under very discouraging conditions presented a very good performance, well worth chancing a frozen ear or two.

The Wainright Knitting Unit

On Wednesday, May 23rd, 1917, an enthusiastic group of knitters met at McMillan Hall to organize a University Knitting Unit. Miss Helen Banister, who was elected president at a previous informal gathering, took charge of our first formal meeting. The membership was open to all women of the University. Two hundred and fifteen dollars were raised to buy wool. The greater part of this sum was donated by friends outside the University who were interested in furthering our Unit. It was decided that during the summer a group system would be inaugurated to insure an efficient distribution and collection of knitted articles. Each group was to consist of ten girls and a captain—all living in the same neighborhood.

At the beginning of the fall semester the name of the Knitting Unit was changed to the “Wainright” in appreciation of all that Mr. Nixon had done for the organization in providing funds. Mr. Nixon was particularly interested in the U. S. S. Wainright.”

There has been a tremendous amount of work turned out by the unit. On all two hundred and seventy-two articles have been sent to the battleship. There are twenty-seven articles not yet completed. Though the unit has not supplied the whole ship, they expect to work consistently on throughout the duration of the war to supply as many men as possible with the much needed articles.

In order to satisfy students of the University who were interested in discussing not only the poetry of "real poets" but also their own compositions, the Poetry Club was formed. In order to prove to the Committee for Admissions that he is truly interested in the writing of poetry an applicant must write an original poem. The Poetry Club has no formal meetings nor organizations, but meets twice a month with a despot, chosen from its members, presiding.
