Despite a depleted membership and difficulty of production because of war conditions, the 1918 Thyrsus annual, "A Single Man," was probably the best in the history of the organization. The play was given at the Victoria Theater on May 8th, for the benefit of the Red Cross.

The acting honors easily belong to Morris Carnovsky. Mr. Carnovsky's performance was consummately polished, without a hint of amateurism. It was, in large measure, his able interpretation of a rather unconvincing role which made the play a success. Max Muench, as Henry Worthington, was excellent.

Genevra Sturdevant had the difficult feminine lead. Gertrude Walther as the young and somewhat foolish Maggie Cottrell, was charming. Miss Walther, besides being a very delightful ingenue, was an actress of ability. Mildred Hess, as the young and pretty Mrs. Worthington, was an actress of distinction. Grace Lewis had the very trying part of the affected Louise Parker, and did it admirably. The minor roles were capably handled.

The Thyrsus Monthly Plays.

For the five performances of the three one-act plays, The Lost Silk Hat, The Clod, and A Dear Little Wife, February 11-13, Thyrsus again returned to Thyrsus Theater, that famous, time-honored stamping ground. Perhaps the return to this native hearth is in part responsible for the very admirable way in which these plays were presented. If so, it is due only in small part to this fact, for the great amount of credit must be given to the actors themselves.

Lord Dunsany's difficult play, The Lost Silk Hat, was presented in a way which solved for the audience the perplexing problem of the dramatic quality of the play. The cast was admirably chosen, and even the stage setting, very new and shiny, was appreciated by the spectators.

Miss Poertner as Sugihara San in A Dear Little Wife, deserves mention for her charming portrayal of the part. She was ably supported by Mr. Goldstein and Mr. Broida.

Of The Clod, the most complete praise is found in the words of Doctor Mackenzie: "Every part was played as it should have been, and the result was a harmony and finish rarely seen off the professional stage."

The greatest praise goes to Miss Jonah for her most excellent acting. She was the clod in every respect, and her portrayal passed far beyond the fold of amateurs.

HEN the Washington unit of the Student Army Training Corps was demobilized on December 16, 1918, the University Military Committee immediately began negotiations with the War Department for the establishment of a unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at this institution. The negotiations were successful, and in January, 1919, voluntary enrollment for military training under the Reserve Corps regulations was opened. Major Wallace M. Craigie, former local S. A. T. C. Commandant, was detailed for duty as Professor of Military Science and Tactics, and Captain Irwin L. Lummis, former Post Adjutant, as his assistant. The cadets were divided according to size into three companies, "A," "B," and "C," and cadet officers placed in charge. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 4 to 5 p.m. were designated as drill days for the unit. Friday was designated as Battalion Parade day, and one day of the week set aside for class room work in tactics.

Under the War Department regulations the R. O. T. C. is divided into two courses, the elementary and the advanced. Three hours drill per week only are required in the preliminary grade, whereas advanced course men must put in a total of five hours per week. Students in the advanced course are paid quarterly commutation of rations at the prevailing daily rate. Recommendations have been made to the War Department to allow students credit towards advanced standing for training with the S. A. T. C. and other military organizations, and it has been suggested that the University authorities allow the Cadet officers salaries ranging from $5 to $10 monthly to cover incidental expenses. Upon completion of the advanced course students showing marked ability are recommended for commission as 2nd Lieutenants in the Reserve Corps.

Following is the line-up of students appointed Cadet Officers:
