Thyrsus Review

The Annual

In the presentation of The Admirable Crichton at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater, May 16, Thyrsus pulled itself out of the mire of "plays for amateurs" into which the 1918 Annual had flung it. Throughout the year the Annual Committee struggled and floundered, but finally plucked up bravely—or perhaps with bravado—and chose one of J. M. Barrie's best and most difficult plays, of which the newspapers remarked, "Not an easy play even for trained professionals." But the performers were well cast in their parts; they were given one of the finest theaters in town; they had gone through the kneading and molding process of Mr. Solari's coaching. Youthful fervor did all else that was needed to make the play successful. The actors seemed to have a fine grasp of the poetry and fairy tale of the play, but they missed a great deal of the fun of the farcical situation.

George Wettle, as the eccentric Lord Loam with an egalitarian hobby, played with a vivacity and spontaneity which raised his acting above the average amateur in the scale of genuineness.

Throughout the play Morris Carnovsky, as Crichton, deserved the hero-b Butler's inseparable epithet "admirable." The niceness of his acting was commendable—as well as the appropriate dignity and solemnity with which he took the ironic humor of the part.

Miss Casey Spear, as the Lady Mary, spoiled darling of Lord Loam, showed versatility in her changes from sophisticated boredom to the winsome, boyish animation of "Polly," and back again to a rather softened and graciously nonchalant Lady Mary.

Kennett McMath made the worthless but witty young Ernest a very amiable and likeable chap. Miss Julia Jonah was very appealing as Tweeny. Perhaps a more sustained brightness and animated vulgarity would have added to the portrayal. Emerson Conzelman played the familiar "eye-glass and gaitored" Lord, and Adele Grafeman, as Lady Brocklehurst, managed graciously the engineering of Act IV.

Miss Mignon Rosenthal, as Lady Catherine, and Miss Gertrude Walther, as Lady Agatha, acted with ease and charm. Jack Becker, as Treheme, made a fine young parson and lover.

The Mellerdrammer

The Diamonds of Death or Duncan Dillingham's Dilemma, a play in four acts by Alfred N. Sack and Sylvan Agatstein, played two successive evenings and a matinee to capacity houses.

It is absolutely certain that this play contained the most exhaustive collection of melodramatic expression known to the English language. The ground is minutely covered—from the childish treble of "Father, I am starving," all the way to "Curses, foiled again!"

The plot—we have forgotten. Was there one? At any rate we are sure that even the most pedantic in the audience found himself moved to tears at the sufferings of the fair Marie and the handsome Duncan—in real life Adele Grafeman and Hixon Kinsella. The audience became hysterically joyous at the final ruin of Glycerine Pete, still living in the farm of Louis Roth. They—the audience again—found their nails biting into their palms in the excitement of the fray; and almost fainted with relief at the death of Hideous Hammond.

The exquisite bunch of white radishes received by Miss Dorothy Jackes testified to the exceptional histrionic powers of that young lady in the part of Neamel, the French maid. Lea Dick made her reputation as a juvenile actress in this production with her "Father, I am starving." Pink McElwee and Fred Pavey exhibited unusual talent in the art of dying. Max Muench was "dauntless"; Cal Hermer was "sleuthish"; Syl. Agatstein was "dopey"; Fred Pavey was "hideous"—all as the program stated.
