Two White House Advisors To Speak At Seminar Today

Two senior members of President Gerald R. Ford's White House staff will speak at a public seminar on "Government Regulation of Business" in the Seeley G. Mudd Law Building Courtroom at 3 p.m. today (Thursday, Sept. 11.) The event is sponsored by WU's Center for the Study of American Business.

The guest speakers will be Roderick M. Hills, Counsel to the President, and L. William Seidman, Assistant to the President for Economic Affairs. They will discuss the "Ford Administration's Efforts to Reform Government Regulation of Business."

Following their discussion, a special panel will query the speakers. Panelists will be: Lee M. Liberman, president of Laclede Gas Company, Edward Greenberg, WU professor of economics, and William J. Marshall, a graduate student in the WU School of Business and Public Administration.

Murray L. Weidenbaum, director of the Center for the Study of American Business, and Mallinckrodt Distinguished University Professor, is seminar chairman. He is a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Economic Policy. Last January, he established the Center to analyze the role of the private enterprise system in America.

Hills and Seidman will be in town to participate in a White House Conference on Domestic and Economic Affairs to be held at Stouffer's Riverfront Towers tomorrow (Sept. 12). President Ford will take part in the Friday all-day conference downtown. It is sponsored by the White House Office of Public Liaison and co-sponsored by 18 local and regional organizations representing business, labor, the news media, professional groups, minority groups, community organizations, women's groups, and environmentalists. The St. Louis meeting is the ninth in a series of White House Conferences to be held throughout the U.S. this year.

$430,000 From G. F. McMillen Estate Helps Finance Law School's New Wing

A gift of approximately $430,000 has been made to Washington University by the George F. McMillen estate to aid in the financing of a new wing of the Seeley G. Mudd Law School, Chancellor William H. Danforth announced. The new facility will be named the George F. McMillen Wing.

"Mr. McMillen's very generous gift has helped us provide facilities essential for the 31 faculty members and 600 students we now have," said Law Dean Edward T. Foote.

McMillen, who died March 11, 1974, was an executive with theRalston Purina Company for 25 years before his retirement in 1943. He took an active interest in the education of young people through the years and in 1963, made a gift of $100,000 to Washington University for the establishment of the George F. McMillen Student Loan Fund. In 1967, McMillen gave $1 million to WU for the construction of a new chemistry building, now known as George F. McMillen Hall.

A member of the Salvation Army's Camp Mihaska at Bourbon, Mo., in the late 1960's.

The George F. McMillen Wing, costing about $600,000, was begun in the summer of 1974 and was completed in time for use this semester. The two-story wing that adjoins the Law School on its north side provides more space for faculty offices and a large and medium-sized classroom. As part of the same project, a two-story addition beneath the tiered classrooms at the northeast corner of the Law School, provides office space for the Urban Law Annual and the extension of the Eugene A. and Adlyne Freund Library. The addition will increase the library's capacity from the present 140,000 books to 200,000 volumes as well as provide additional study areas for students. Space for an additional third floor of the Library is available under the newly constructed two floors of the Library if needed in the future.

The design of the George F. McMillen Wing, which carries through the motifs of the main building, was done by the original architects of the Law School—Anselevicius, Rupe, Associates (formerly Schnebli, Anselevicius & Montgomery).
Dimitri, who combines the talents of virtuoso musician, circus clown and classic mime, will bring his one-man show from Switzerland to Edison Theatre the evenings of Oct. 31-Nov. 1 during a premiere tour of the United States.

One of the important new American theatre companies, the Manhattan Project, will open the theatre season this fall on campus with Samuel Beckett’s Endgame Saturday evening, Sept. 20, followed Sunday evening, Sept. 21, by an adaptation of Lewis Carroll’s Alice in Wonderland. The Beckett revival, described by Clive Barnes in the N. Y. Times as “one of the best things in the American theatre here and now” will be presented in Edison Theatre; the reconstruction of Alice by Andre Gregory will be performed in the intimacy of the Mallinckrodt Center Drama Studio.

Originally a New York University graduate theatre class under Broadway director Andre Gregory, the Manhattan Project has grown in two years to achieve recognition for the “technique of Mr. Gregory and his actors, who are all so good, dare so much and achieve so much,” (Barnes, N. Y. Times). “Gregory,” said Time Magazine, “is remarkable for sheer theatricality. His special gift is to alter the ratio of expectation between an audience and a work.”

Other companies to appear this fall in Edison Theatre include the Margarit Ballet Dance Theatre Company, Sept. 26-27; Burmese National Theatre, Oct. 24; Dimitri! Clown! Oct. 31-Nov. 1, and Dan Wagener and Dancers, Nov. 21-22. The University’s Performing Arts Area will produce Shakespeare’s Measure for Measure directed by Sidney J. Friedman the weekends of Oct. 10-12 and 17-19, and Ibsen’s Hedda Gabler directed by Herbert F. Metz Nov. 14-16.

The Polish Mime Ballet Theatre will head the new year’s offerings, with performances Jan. 23-24. The City Center Acting Company will present four different plays the weekend of Feb. 27-29; Mummenschanz returns to Edison Theatre Friday, March 5; Ensemble Nipponia will appear March 7, and the Alwin Nikolais Dance Theatre, March 26-27. The Performing Arts Area productions in 1976 include The Trials of Brother Jero, Feb. 6-8, a musical Feb. 20-22, the Washington University Dance Theatre, April 9-11; and Sanetomo Shuppan, an English language premiere of a prize-winning Japanese play, April 23-25.

Students can save more than 50 per cent over the single admission ticket price by purchasing a pass for the 1975-76 theatre season at $17; faculty and staff members can save more than 25 per cent by purchasing a $35 season pass. For more information call the theatre box office, ext. 4113.

Eagleton To Speak September 19
At First Campus Bicentennial Program

United States Senator Thomas F. Eagleton (D. Mo.) will speak at the first Bicentennial event on campus, Friday, Sept. 19, at noon in the Brookings quadrangle. During the program, Richard W. Davis, chairman of both the History Department and WU's Bicentennial Committee, will introduce Mrs. Bonnie B. McAfee, Regional Deputy Director of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA). She will present an official Bicentennial flag to Chancellor William H. Danforth. The flag will be unfurled over the Brookings tower arch to the fanfare of a brass band directed by Dan Presgrave.

Washington University, established more than 75 years after the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776, is not, of course, eligible for DAR or Sons of the Revolution certification. But, nonetheless, it is linked with founding father Thomas Jefferson's real estate bonanza of 1803 (the Louisiana Purchase) a fait accompli commemorated in 1904 with the great St. Louis World's Fair, the buildings tower arch to the fanfare of a brass band directed by Dan Presgrave.

When this historic transfer of land from France to the United States was commemorated in 1904 with the great St. Louis World's Fair, the buildings on the quad (built at the time as the core of the new WU Hilltop Campus) were leased to the Fair Management for $175,000. They, together with Francis Field and Francis Gymnasium (site of the 1904 Olympics), became landmarks of the Fair, and a year later

Mallinckrodt Center Board To Offer American Music Series

Washington University's Mallinckrodt Center Programming Board will offer a series of five concerts in Graham Chapel this year designed to explore the many facets of America's musical traditions. The series, "Perspectives in American Music," will feature five distinct styles of music: country piano blues with Roosevelt Sykes, New Orleans pianist and composer, Sept. 19; traditional folk music with Jean Ritchie, Kentucky dulcimer player and ballad singer, Oct. 10; Chicago blues with the Otis Rush Band, Nov. 15; contemporary jazz with Michal Urbaniak, Polish jazz musician, Jan. 30; and progressive bluegrass with the New Grass Revival, a bluegrass band from Louisville, Ky., Feb. 13. All concerts will begin at 8 p.m.

General admission season tickets will be available at the Mallinckrodt Center box office, Streetside Records, and Music Folk for $15. WU students with Student Union I.D. cards may purchase season tickets for $10 at Mallinckrodt Center only. Individual tickets will be available for $3.50 in advance ($2.50 for WU students with S.U.I.D.'s) and $4 at the door (everyone). For further information, call ext. 4996.

physicists and health scientists for over 35 years. The WU machine is the only facility of its kind in an area including the states of Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Wyoming, North and South Dakota. Over 70 Ph.D.'s have been trained and over 150 papers have been written on work done at the cyclotron. Presently, 12 of the approximately 100 graduate students in this country working in nuclear and radiochemical research are using the WU cyclotron as a tool.

Wahl said ERDA apparently is pressed for funds because its responsibilities are very broad. Consequently, he said, "it is shifting the emphasis of the research it supports towards practical matters, and at the same time striving to make more efficient use of very expensive higher energy accelerators located elsewhere in the country."

STUDENTS AND MEMBERS of the faculty and staff are invited to join the University Band, being formed under the direction of Dan Presgrave. Call the Department of Music, ext. 4582, for details.
