Bringing out the best: Jennifer Mitchell, a sophomore, enjoys playground fun with her new ‘buddies’ at the University City Children’s Center. Mitchell is one of 25 Washington University students participating in the Early Learners Program, sponsored by the Campus Y. The student volunteers assist the centers with playground maintenance and other support.

Washington University employees win with what we have’ could help employees who work on the Hilltop participation is open to all University system, to conserving energy in a way that over time, certain departments attrition. That is not to eliminate jobs as a result of an idea,” said White. She added, however, that over time, certain departments may have fewer employees through attrition.

Great employee ideas

Cost-savings campaign is under way

Figuring out “how we can do more with what we have” could help Washington University employees win a dream trip for two to Hawaii or Europe, and maybe even a reserved complimentary parking space on campus for a year.

The dream vacations and promotion parking spot are prizes designed to encourage participation in Washington’s new program-improvement and cost-savings campaign. Approximately 350 staff members attended an informational meeting on the campaign Oct. 3 in Edison Theatre.

Titled "George E. Mylonas: Uncovering Ancient Mycenae," the lecture will be illustrated with color slides. It is free and open to the public.

Mylonas, who was 89 at the time of his death, was serving as Secretary General of the Archaeological Society of Athens. Funeral services were held in Mycenae, Greece. Mylonas was internationally recognized for his archaeological excavations in Mycenae, which began in the 1950s. For 30 years, he directed excavations at Mycenae for Washington University, and his work earned him an international reputation in the field of ancient archaeology. He later went on to serve as a policy analyst and educator. From 1940 until 1999, he was engaged in engineering research, design and management at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), where he led the agency's deepest diving research vehicle. In 1987, he was appointed the first science and technology advisor to Congress and was the founding director of the Congressional Science Policy Research Division. He later served on the science policy staffs of Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon. In 1968, he led the group of scientists and engineers in the treaty banning nuclear weapons in the seas, as well as a wide variety of other international agreements in science and technology.

Mylonas's books include "The Politics of the Oceans" (1972), "Margrit for Survival" (1979), and "Tradeoffs: Imperatives of Choice in a High-Tech Society" (1986).

George E. Mylonas was an elected member of the National Academy of Engineering and the National Academy of Public Administration.
West Germany's highest honor for cultural contributions goes to Lutzeler

West Germany's highest honor for cultural and societal contributions, the Cross of Merit, was bestowed upon Paul Michael Lutzeler, Ph.D., professor of German and comparative literature, during a reception held Oct. 5 in Alan Hall lounge.

Lutzeler, who is also director of the University's Western European Studies Program, received the award from Gunter Wasserberg, consul general of the Federal Republic of Germany, who is based in Chicago. Accepting the Cross, which is granted by the president of the Federal Republic of Germany, is given to individuals who make significant contributions to German culture and society.

A former chairman of Washington's Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures, Lutzeler is an expert in the field of German and European Romanticism, German and Austrian exile literature in the United States, and contemporary literature in German-speaking countries. Last March he received the Austrian Cross of Honor for Arts and Sciences (First Class), which is Austria's highest award for scholarly contributions.

Lutzeler founded the Center for Contemporary German Studies at Washington, which includes the Subkamp-Insel Collection at Ohio University. He also established the Gothic Lit. Writer in Residence position in the department, supported by the Mars Kilpatrick Foundation in New York.

Lutzeler is editor-in-chief of The German Quarterly, the scholarly international publication of the American Association of Teachers of German. He has organized exchange programs on the undergraduate, graduate and faculty level with several leading West German universities and has written several books on German and European literature.

Steedman Fellowship award increases

The Steedman Fellowship governing committee at the University has announced plans to substantially increase the amount of the award, says Constantine E. Michaelides, dean of the School of Architecture.

In addition, the fellowship now will be open to architects, regardless of age, for a period up to eight years after the receipt of their professional degrees. The competition will be held biennially instead of annually, with the next competition taking place in 1989-1990.

The fellowship previously provided $11,000 to an architect, age 21 to 33, for a year of travel and architectural study abroad. The biennial award will allow for a substantial increase in the stipend and will enable the award recipient to travel more extensively during the year abroad.

In 1985, the fellowship was named for James Harrison Steedman, an 1880 graduate of the University. Steedman died after serving in the U.S. Naval Reserves during World War I.

Specific details about the amount of the award and application procedures will be announced at the beginning of the academic year of 1988-1989.

For more information, write the Governing Committee, Steedman Fellowship and School of Architecture, Washington University, Box 1079, One Brookings Drive, St. Louis, MO 63130.
