and undergraduate training. For the past four decades, Graber has devoted himself to educational research. While teaching orthodontics at Northwestern University, he co-founded its Cleft Lip and Palate Institute in 1947. Later, he co-founded and became the first president of Kentworth Dental Research Foundation in 1964, a position he still holds today. As a professor at the University of Chicago from 1967 to 1982, he founded the orthodontic program at the Pitzer School of Medicine.

Today, he continues to maintain a private orthodontic practice and serve as visiting professor at the University of Michigan. Graber received a degree from Washington University's School of Dental Medicine in 1945, a master's degree in orthodontics from Northwestern University Dental School in 1946 and a doctorate in anatomy from Northwestern's Medical School in 1950. Stanley F. Musial, affectionately known as "Stan The Man," was star of the St. Louis Baseball Cardinals for 22 seasons. He won seven National League hitting championships, hitting over .300 his first 16 seasons in the major leagues and ending up with a career average of .311. He was selected National League Player of the Year three times and The Sporting News' Major League Player of the Year twice. Sports Illustrated named him its Sportman of the Year in 1957 and The Sporting News honored him as Player of the Decade for 1946-1956. Musial was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame in 1969. He still holds almost all National League records for durability and consistency. He has served as senior vice president of St. Louis Baseball Cardinals president and chairman of the St. Louis Steamers. President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed him to head the U.S. Council on Physical Fitness. He now devotes most of his time to charities.

Howard Nemerov Washington University's Edward Mallinckrodt Distinguished University Professor Emeritus of English, Howard S. Nemerov is one of the greatest literary presences in the United States. He was appointed the country's third poet laureate in 1998, a position he held for two years. A Chancellor's Distinguished Service Award of American Poets, Nemerov is author of 26 books, including 11 volumes of poetry. One of his volumes, The Collected Poems of Howard Nemerov (1976), won both a National Book Award and a Pulitzer Prize. In addition to poetry, Nemerov has written novels, short stories and criticism. Nemerov, who received his bachelor's degree in 1941 from Harvard, joined Washington's faculty in 1969 as Fanny Hurst Visiting Professor of English. Among his numerous honors, he was one of 11 people awarded the National Medal of the Arts in 1987 by President Reagan at a White House ceremony.

Helen Vender was widely regarded as one of America's leading critics of poetry. Since the 1960s, Vender has contributed to 200 literary journals, including articles, review-essays, and reviews to major literary publications, most notably the New York Times Book Review and The New Yorker, where she became the poetry critic since 1978. She is the author of seven books including Fanny Hurst: Part of Us: Modern American Poets, which was the unanimous choice for the 1980 National Book Critics Circle Award in criticism.

A Phi Beta Kappa, she graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Emmanuel College in 1954. After graduation she studied French and Italian for a year at the University of Louvain and spent a year studying English literature at Harvard University, where she currently is the A. Kingsley Porter University Professor in the Department of English and placement program director for Ph.D. students in the department. Vender also is Harvard's associate dean for academic affairs. She was Washington University's Fanny Hurst Visiting Professor of English Literature in 1976.

Clifton R. Wharton Jr. has excelled in three careers: foreign economic development, higher education and business. Since 1987, he has been chairman and chief executive officer of the Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association — College Retirement Equities Fund (TIAA-CREF), which is the largest pension fund in the world and one of the largest U.S. insurance companies.

His career began as a foundation official helping developing nations in Latin America and Asia, particularly in agriculture. He served as president of Michigan State University from 1970-78. He then was appointed chancellor of the State University of New York, the country's largest university system, where he remained until 1987. Wharton entered Harvard at the age of 16 and graduated cum laude in 1957 with a bachelor's degree in history. He received a master's degree in public administration from the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies and his doctorate in 1958 from the University of Chicago. In a recent national survey of more than 500 presidents of public colleges and universities, Wharton was ranked one of the five most influential leaders in the country.
