Welcome the new SCC Biostatistic Core to the Division of Public Health Sciences. In conjunction with the Dean and the Division of Biostatistics, Siteman Cancer Center is launching a cancer-specific biostatistics core. Effective 7/1/15, three current faculty and three current staff with extensive cancer experience moved from the Division of Biostatistics into this new SCC core and the Division of Public Health Sciences in the Department of Surgery. These faculty & staff include: Feng Gao, Kim Trinkaus, Esther Liu, Rosy Luo, Ningying Wu, and Yu Tao. The new SCC biostatistics core will be co-led by Drs Graham Colditz and Feng Gao and will provide all biostatistics support & services for cancer center researchers. Click to learn more about biostat faculty & staff. Click here for additional information about the core.

The Division of Public Health Sciences would also like to welcome a new staff member Katy Henke. Katy Henke is the new media/marketing coordinator replacing Amy Ostendorf. Katy is located in 41S.

Media notes: Graham A Colditz, MD, DrPH, Katherine Weilbaecher, and Hank Dart have published a new e-book for the public, titled: TOGETHER - Every Woman's Guide to Preventing Breast Cancer. The book is available free on iBooks (and in other formats) and takes a unique generational approach to breast health and cancer prevention, with practical tips for mothers, grandmothers, and women of all ages. Click for more information about TOGETHER.
