Announcement of the 30-year pact between the Washington University School of Medicine and Barnes Hospital was made December 2 by representatives of the Barnes and Allied Hospitals Society and the St. Louis Children’s Hospital Society at the University Club Dec. 2.

Continuation of the historic partnership between Washington University and Barnes Hospital was assured Dec. 2 when the governing bodies of the two institutions approved a new 30-year contract.

Edgar M. Queeny, chairman of the Barnes Trustees, and James S. McDonnell, chairman of the university’s Board of Directors, announced the signing of the contract and issued a joint statement saying: “Now an outstanding university that includes a fine medical school can move forward together with a group of famous hospitals, without being handicapped by an obsolete contract that had fostered disharmony.

“The new contract creates a closer and more effective partnership. It has been made in a spirit of goodwill and of mutual appreciation of each other’s problems. It gives promise of assuring that St. Louis, long noted for its high reputation in medicine, will be one of the great medical care and research capitals of the World.”

Under the new contract, the Barnes Trustees will continue to operate not only Barnes Hospital, the Rand Johnson Building and the new Queeny Tower—which they own—but also the patient-care areas of Maternity, McMillan, Renard and Wohl hospitals and the Washington University-Wohl Clinics—all of which are owned by the university. The Washington University Medical School will continue to provide the entire professional staff of all of these hospitals and clinics.

A basic change from the old system is the financial provisions of the new contract. Barnes will consolidate the accounts for all of the units which it operates. If, in any year, there is an operating deficit, Washington University will contribute to Barnes an amount equal to one-half of the deficit. If there is an operating surplus after full funding of depreciation, Barnes will pay one-half of it to the university as reimbursement for the services provided by the Washington University Medical School to Barnes.

The contract also makes provision for maintenance of a reasonable level of working capital, to which both Barnes and the university will contribute equally.

The university has agreed to proceed with the design and construction of a new Maternity Hospital and with the renovation and air-conditioning of McMillan Hospital as soon as enough cash gifts and pledges are received.

Mark Persons

Wallace R. Persons, chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of Emerson Electric Co., its subsidiaries and divisions, joined the Board of Trustees of Barnes Hospital in January 1962.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio, he took his M.S. degree in Engineering from Case Institute of Technology in 1932. He is a member of the Society of Sigma Xi.

During his 19 years with Lincoln Electric Company of Cleveland, Persons rose from sales engineer to Vice President and Director between 1954-1958. He joined Emerson Electric in 1954 as President.

He is a director of Emerson and its Subsidiaries, First National Bank in St. Louis; St. Louis Union Trust Company;
Dr. J. M. Taveras Is New Director Of Mallinckrodt

Dr. Juan Taveras will be the new director of the Edward Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology.

Dr. Taveras is now professor of radiology at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City. He is expected to join the faculty in mid-1965.

Dr. Taveras, Columbia University faculty member since 1950, is internationally known for his research and publications dealing with radiology of the nervous system. His book, "Diag nostic Neuroradiology," written with Dr. Ernest Wood, appeared in 1964 and is regarded as the definitive work in this area. At Columbia, Dr. Taveras was director of radiology at the Neurological Institute.

Dr. Taveras will be the third director of Mallinckrodt, which opened in 1931. The present facility and its expansion were made possible by gifts of the Mallinckrodt family.

Edward Mallinckrodt Jr. recently made a gift to enlarge the institute's research educational and patient service activities.

Dr. Taveras graduated from the Normal School of Santiago, Dominican Republic, and received his M.D. degree from the University of Santo Domingo. He entered the graduate school of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania in 1944 for training in radiology and received a second M.D. degree in 1949 from there.

A GIFT OF APPRECIATED STOCK TO BARNES HOSPITAL

A gift of stock is a gift from "capital" rather than "income" and as such does not reduce, but increases, spendable income in the year of the gift by reducing income taxes.

REDUCES INCOME TAXES

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Original Cost of Stock</td>
<td>$1,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Proceeds of sale of stock</td>

</tr>
<tr>

</tr>
<tr>

<td>1,000 ($1,600 above — $600 capital gains tax)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The value of making a gift of the appreciated stock itself, rather than selling the stock and donating the proceeds of the sale is quite discernible.

The above examples are necessarily sketchy and because of the complexity of the tax law, no gift of appreciated stock should be made without the advice of an attorney or other tax expert.

Electron Microscopy Study Furthered By New Hartford Grant

A grant of $167,280 to Barnes Hospital for the further investigation of electron microscopy as a surgical pathology has been given by the John A. Hartford Foundation, Inc. of New York City.

Announcement of the grant, the second of its kind in three years, was made jointly today by Mr. Ralph W. Burger, president of the Hartford Foundation and Mr. Edgar M. Queeny, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Barnes Hospital.

In 1961, the Foundation made an initial grant of $100,490 for application and development of electron microscopy techniques as an aid to diagnosis and study of routine surgical specimens.

The Barnes Trustees, in accepting the grant, voiced their appreciation and gratitude for the continuing interest the Hartford Foundation has displayed in research problems occurring in hospitals and that this and previous grants have also enabled the medical center to better train young physicians in the scientific approach to clinical problems which need solution.

Dr. Lauren V. Ackerman, surgical pathologist of Barnes Hospital, is directing the program. He said the electron microscope permits a much more precise diagnosis than can be made with an ordinary light microscope.

Use of the electron microscope during the past three years has shown much promise in its application to medicine, Dr. Ackerman said. Studies have been conducted in ultrastructure and surgical pathology, tumors of the salivary gland, virus hepatitis, virus disease, Kaposi's sarcoma, painful skin tumor, the nature and origin of certain sweat gland tumors, the discovery of a new granule-containing cell of the thyroid gland, and in other areas, he said.

Electron microscopic study of salivary gland tumors, Dr. Ackerman said, has broadened medical concepts of the causes of tumors and holds promise of revolutionizing medical understanding of this diagnostically complex area.

Bemberg New Chief Engineer

Kurt Bemberg has assumed the duties of chief engineer of the Barnes Hospital Maintenance Department.

Bemberg comes from Maloney Electric Company where he has been plant engineer for several years.

He will replace Carl Pfeifer, who has served in the above capacity for 21 months. Pfeifer will continue to serve Barnes Hospital as consultant for planning and development.

Bemberg, who enjoys his leisure hours with electronics, fishing, and photography, also devotes much of his spare time to organizational work.

He is a member of the Engineers Club of St. Louis; the St. Louis Chapter of the Missouri Society of Professional Engineers and the National Society of Professional Engineers; the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Plant Engineers and the National Society of that organization; the St. Louis Chapter of Universal Craftsmen Council of Engineers.

He holds membership in the Theodore Roosevelt Lodge No. 661 of the A.F.&A.M. where he is senior warden; general superintendent of Sunday School, Trinity United Church of Christ and is a member of the American Ordnance Association.

Bemberg is married and he and his wife, Eleanor, have two sons, James, 16 and Mark, 14.

The two closing months of the calendar year have so very much to offer to all who are concerned with the treasured values of life. Treasured values are around us every day, of course, but somehow these months bring us to an awareness that we are likely to miss in the regular environment in which we live. We can afford to pause along the way and try to catch the true spirit of thankfulness and giving.

In a recent issue of a national magazine there was an effort to portray the development and meaning of a day we call Thanksgiving. There were some interesting facts that we might not have known, or had forgotten for the time. It was wonderful that the articles were given on the subject, for certainly there were many who were enlightened.

There was one thing that surely many felt after every line had been read, and that was that the true meaning of gratitude must be felt in a very real way by the one who has it. Our tradition is rich and beautiful, and it produces an American spirit that is contagious.

History alone can not make us feel good about being thankful.

The giving of gifts is the sort of thing that can get warped out of true meanings, but who would be so bold as to say that the spirit of it should be killed because of this?

For so many of us, giving at this time of the year goes far beyond the bounds of close relatives and true friends. It includes people who live in lands we shall never visit, who face needs that we can never fully understand.

This makes us feel good about giving.

An avid hunter, Persons shares Edgar Queeny's enthusiasm for Africa, where he went on safari in 1962 and is returning in 1965. He is an enthusiastic football, baseball and basketball fan.
