Greek comedy recast

Adaptation of Aristophanes' 'Lysistrata' depicts the humorous side of alternatives to war

The Performing Arts Area will present an original adaptation of Aristophanes' comedy 'Lysistrata' Friday through Sunday, Oct. 14-16 and 21-23, at Edison Theatre on campus. All performances begin at 8 p.m.

Diana Lee, WU assistant professor of drama, and Cindy A. Lutenbacher, a recent WU graduate with a master's degree in fiction, adapted the play. Lee will direct the production and Lutenbacher will act as dramaturge and assistant director.

'Lysistrata' focuses on the first feminist in history who brings other women to a new social consciousness; together, they inspire the men to consider alternatives to war," said Lee.

The drama is set in a tropical rain forest and will be performed on a thrust proscenium stage. A trio of theatre-goers will receive a ticket to the performance; enjoy wine, cheese and conversation in Lambert Lounge during intermission; and have coffee and dessert with the cast after the performance.

For reservations, send checks payable to the Woman's Club of Washington University to Mrs. Anna Mac Ballard, 7580 Kingsbury, St. Louis, Mo. 63130. The deadline is Oct. 19.

Feminist author, poet Robin Morgan to speak on Women's Movement

Feminist author and poet Robin Morgan will speak on "Sisterhood and the Women's Revolution" at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 19, in Graham Chapel.

Morgan's lecture, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the Women's Programming Board, Women's Studies, the Assembly Series and the Campus Bookstore.

Morgan has been active in the Women's Movement since 1967 when she co-founded New York Radical Women, the first Women's Liberation group in the city. In 1968, she organized the Miss America Pageant Protest, the first mass demonstration of the current wave of feminism. The following year she organized a nation-wide protest against bridal fairs.

Morgan compiled and edited Sisterhood is Powerful, the first comprehensive anthology of writings from the Women's Liberation Movement. Published in 1970, the book, which includes articles, poems, photographs and manifestos, is a basic text in many women's studies programs.

She has authored two works of nonfiction, The Anatomy of Freedom and Going Too Far. The Personal Chronicle of a Feminist, and is working on a novel. She also is working on a novel. She also is working on a novel.

Constitutional convention controversy is topic of law conference Gerald Gunther, William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Law at Stanford University, will be the keynote speaker at the Sixth Annual Constitutional Conference on Sunday, Oct. 16, from 1 to 4:30 p.m. at WU's School of Law.

The conference, titled "The Constitutional Convention Controversy," is co-sponsored by the School of Law and the St. Louis chapter of the American Jewish Congress.

Missouri and 51 other states have passed resolutions calling for a contitutional convention to pass a balanced budget amendment. Although Article V of the U.S. Constitution provides for this option, the only constitutional convention yet held in the U.S. was in 1787 to amend the Articles of Confederation. Some people fear that a constitutional convention would subject the entire Constitution to revision; others believe that a convention is a process suited to achieving a balanced federal budget.

Engineering degree receives accreditation
The Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology has granted full accreditation to the School of Engineering’s newest undergraduate degree — the Bachelor of Science in Engineering and Public Policy. The accreditation (the highest level that the agency grants), lasts for six years with a re-accreditation visit at the end of that period. All seven WU undergraduate engineering degrees that were reviewed last November received the same six-year accreditation, including civil engineering, chemical engineering, mechanical engineering, computer science, electrical engineering, and systems science and engineering.

Gunther has taught constitutional law at Stanford University since 1959. The author of two widely used casebooks on constitutional law, Gunther is currently working on the designated biography of Judge Learned Hand. Gunther’s keynote address is also the Jerome W. Sidel Memorial Lecture, named in honor of the late St. Louis attorney and former president of the St. Louis chapter of the American Jewish Congress.

Kenneth A. Shepsle, WU professor of political science, will speak "Against a Balanced Budget by Convention" at the conference, and Gerad T. Dunne, professor of law at St. Louis University, will speak "For a Balanced Budget by Convention." There is no conference fee, but seating in Mudd Hall’s courtroom is limited. Advance reservations can be made by calling Marge Bilynski of the American Jewish Congress at 993-5505.

Political economy committee formed
A Committee on Political Economy has been formed by a group of faculty members from the departments of political science and economics. According to Kenneth A. Shepsle, chairman of the committee and professor of political science, WU is among the first to institute an interdisciplinary committee on political economy.

"Several top universities, including Carnegie-Mellon, the California Institute of Technology and the University of Rochester, are currently building strength in the field of political economics," said Shepsle.

"WU, however, already had the faculty resources to be a recognized leader among them. Instituting an interdisciplinary committee on political economics is unique among traditional arts and science faculties," Shepsle said.

Other committee members are: James E. Alt, professor of political science; Randall L. Calvert, assistant professor of political science; Arthur T. Demuzio, associate professor of economics; and Barry R. Weingast, associate professor of economics.

The committee was approved by the Faculty Council of Arts and Sciences last spring, according to Ralph E. Morrow, dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and provost-designate.

Modern political economy is a relatively young field of study. It explodes the effects of politics on ecoonomic institutions and practices and the effects of economic self-interest on political institutions and practices.

According to Shepsle, the committee not only will enhance the research capabilities of the faculty but also will enrich the undergraduate and graduate curricula in political science and economics.

The committee plans to sponsor a visiting fellow of political economics every other year, and a visiting post-doctoral fellow and doctoral fellow on an annual basis.

This year, William Riker, Joseph Wilson Professor of Political Science and dean of graduate studies at the University of Rochester, was named distinguished visiting professor of political economy and senior visiting fellow of the committee on political economy. Evelyn Fink, also of the University of Rochester, was named visiting post-doctoral fellow, and Michael Munger, a WU graduate student in economics, was awarded a dissertation fellowship.

An annual undergraduate lecture on political economics also will be sponsored by the committee. A lecture by William Riker is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 3.

Shepsle said the committee plans to sponsor a two- to three-day research conference on political economics every other year.

The advantages of having a strong, interdisciplinary research committee on political economy is twofold," Shepsle said. "It will increase the visibility of the research by our faculty and it will enhance the undergraduate and graduate training in this area. In order to understand an economic system, you must have a firm understanding of the politics of the society in which it is set up and vice versa. The committee should prove to be an asset to both faculty and students."

Medical center provided $66 million in unreimbursed medical care in 1982

Sponsoring institutions of the WU Medical Center provided more than $66 million in unreimbursed medical care during the 1982 fiscal year. The amount of unreimbursed medical care represented an increase of more than $147 million in unreimbursed care in the last five years.

The information was released Sept. 20 at the annual meeting of the medical center's board of directors. Sponsoring institutions of the medical center are: Barnes Hospital, Jewish Hospital; Children's Hospital; Central Institute for the Deaf; Barnard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital; and the School of Medicine.

The medical center reported spending $58.1 million on research and $56.4 million for capital improvements. There were 10,953 employees in 1982, for whom salary expenditures totaled $208.3 million.

New members appointed to the board include Robert E. Frank and John R. Jordan, representing Barnes Hospital, and David M. Kipnis, representing WU's School of Medicine.

Desert architecture exhibit on display in Givens Hall

"Spectacular Vernacular: Traditional Desert Architecture from West Africa and Southwest Asia" is currently on display through Oct. 31 in the first floor corridor of Givens Hall.

This Smithsonian Institution's traveling exhibition includes 93 color and 38 black-and-white photographs, along with six maps and schematic drawings, and compendious interpretive text. Building techniques are illustrated as well as cooling technologies and their practical modern application.

This form of traditional desert building is found throughout West Africa and Southwest Asia and consists largely of unbaked, sun-dried earth. Architectural historian Jean-Louis Bourgeois conducted research on the exhibit. Photographs were taken by Carollee Pelos.

According to Bourgeois, the study "illuminates an ecologically sound approach to building that cement is fast replacing. Generally far more expensive than mud and far hotter, cement in the desert is cruel. The exhibition reflects the most progressive thinking in both the Third and Industrialized Worlds. Desert architecture needs to advance back to mud."

The exhibit may be viewed weekdays from 7:50 a.m. to 11 p.m.
