"The future of the Washington University Medical Center continues to rest on its ability to attract bright, inquiring scholars whose ideas and work create the sense of academic excitement that reflects innovative approaches to research and clinical practice," said Dr. Samuel B. Guze, president of Washington University Medical Center board of directors at the group's annual meeting.

More than 2,200 are enrolled in a broad spectrum of training programs at the center, which is entering its second decade as a corporate entity. The Medical Center is comprised of The Jewish Hospital of St. Louis, Barnard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital, Barnes Hospital, Central Institute for the Deaf, St. Louis Children's Hospital and Washington University, including its School of Medicine.

The report also mentioned a few of the advances in medical care and technology that now are present in the Medical Center, including new techniques for performing bone biopsy under local anesthesia developed by Jewish Hospital scientists.

Commenting on the physical changes at the Medical Center, Dr. Guze said, "Over the past year, more intensive planning has occurred than at any period in its history," citing among other newly completed construction, the nine-story Sydney M. Shoenberg Pavilion at Jewish Hospital with 180 beds, a new radiology suite and surgical suite, clinical laboratories and more efficient admitting facilities.

Among statistics presented in the report were the continuing climb of operating costs: operations, $131.7 million; salaries, $70.4 million for 8,585 employees, and research, $20.8 million.

Dr. Guze gave prominent attention to the neighborhood around the center's 50-acre area. Reiterating the Medical Center's commitment to stay in the Central West End, the report noted that for the past three years an ad hoc committee had quietly explored ways in which the center could assist in revitalizing the surrounding area.

The project's approach will be to preserve as many existing buildings as possible while constructing new housing in a variety of styles and types. It is anticipated that broad selection of housing would appeal to many people associated with the Medical Center, as well as the growing number of persons who prefer to live and work in the city.

Extensive changes of the street system, landscaped open space and recreational facilities also are envisioned. Commercial areas will be strengthened through the development of a town center. In June, the St. Louis Board of Aldermen passed a bill qualifying the 36-block area, both within and around the Medical Center, for redevelopment.

Dr. Guze also noted that the Medical Center provided in excess of $5.4 million in free patient care while completing more than $25 million in new buildings and renovations last year.

In commenting on the accomplishments of the past year, Dr. Guze said, "Increased confidence in one another and recognition of common concerns and goals have enabled the members of the Medical Center to address problems of greater scope and importance than ever before."

Edward F. Schweich Dies

Edward F. Schweich, an active member of the Jewish community and a member of the Hospital Board of Directors, died Thursday, December 12. Mr. Schweich formerly served as a vice president of the Hospital board. He also served on the board of the Jewish Federation, was a former chairman of the Federation Planning Committee and was active in Federation campaigns. He was a consultant to the Cerro Corporation and was previously president of the Lewin Mathes Division. He is survived by his wife, Dorothy Lewin Schweich, a son Henry L. Who Takes Care of the Patient?

Patient care is a team effort at Jewish Hospital.

The private patient entering the hospital becomes the focus of a network of skilled staff who give total, round-the-clock patient care, who serve to aid, reinforce and supplement the private physician.

Leading the team, the private physician uses the expertise and energies of a full-time specialist staff and a vigorous house staff of interns, residents, fellows and medical students.

The primary purpose of a teaching hospital is to render the highest quality of patient care through the most sophisticated means. In order to teach, the medical staff must know new techniques and advanced equipment; they must supervise and monitor treatment for effectiveness. The stimulating presence of inquiring, eager medical students and house staff provides an enthusiastic atmosphere for exploration of new methods of patient care.

The patient, and indeed, the community benefit from this process which provides a comprehensive range of personnel, facilities and services.

Three physicians from the Hospital’s Department of Medicine explain their functions in the hospital teaching environment and their relationship to the team approach to patient care: Dr. Benjamin A. Borowsky, attending staff physician; Dr. William E. Hinkley, chief resident in medicine, and Dr. Robert M. Senior, director of the pulmonary division.

In the early morning hours a patient awakens with sudden, severe chest pain. Within minutes the house staff -- intern and resident -- can be at the patient’s bedside administering emergency medical care. They are already familiar with the patient’s medical history. It would have been impossible for the patient’s private physician to get to the hospital in time to promptly evaluate the possibility of an acute heart attack.

The house staff handle the emergency and report to the private physician.

The house staff provides skilled follow-up on a 24-hour basis -- they’re alert to emergency situations and remain on call for care as needed. When the intern or resident writes orders or performs a spinal tap, draws blood or starts intravenous fluids, it may seem as if he is performing more services than the patient’s own private physician.

“But, in fact, he is acting under the direct supervision and knowledge of the private physician,” explains Dr. Borowsky. “The house staff are plus-people.”

As a member of the private attending staff, Dr. Borowsky has an office outside the hospital where he sees his patients. When it becomes necessary to admit a patient, he is responsible for the care, he makes the decisions and visits his patients daily, or more often if required.

“There are great advantages for a sick person in a teaching institution such as Jewish Hospital. We discuss cases with residents and interns, they develop their own thinking, examine patients, carry out bedside procedures, run routine tests, and after consultation with the private physician, write orders. But everything they are doing is with the permission and supervision of the private physician.

"The house staff is valuable, indispensable for optimal patient care. But the private physician makes the ultimate decision," Dr. Borowsky stresses.

Dr. Hinkley, now chief resident in medicine, has been at Jewish Hospital for six years as intern, resident, fellow, "so I have some basis for commenting on the relationship between house staff and private physician.

"I see the team approach of a teaching hospital as a great advantage to the patient entered here. Since a patient's own doctor cannot possibly be in the hospital all the time, subspecialty consultants, residents, interns, medical students -- all study and know the case. With this system, there are physicians in the hospital 24 hours a day who know the patient intimately.

"In the hospital, the intern, who is an M.D., writes orders after discussion and consultation with the attending physician, so that both see the direction of diagnosis and treatment. This is standard for a teaching institution. The primary care physician also writes orders at any time," explains Dr. Hinkley.

Within the Hospital's comprehensive clinical services, a total of 50 full-time physicians engage in patient care, consultation and medical education. These specialists are involved as well in research directly applicable to patient care. Dr. Senior, pulmonary division director, is one of 20 full-time salaried physicians in the Department of Medicine.

Describing his relationship to the patient admitted by a private physician, Dr. Senior says, "My role is that of consultant. What this means is that I see patients at the request of their personal physician and after the physician has obtained the consent of the patient or family for the consultation. I make suggestions as to diagnosis and treatment. It is the private physician's privilege and responsibility to do with my advice as he sees fit.

"Requests for consultation usually occur when there is either an uncommon problem or a severe lung problem. We get involved with a lot of patients who didn't come into the hospital primarily because the lung was the trouble, but whose lungs became involved as a consequence of another problem. For example, in a severe heart attack, the lungs may not function properly, which can be a major problem. The private physician may then invite me to help him with diagnosis and management.

"Full-time specialists at the Hospital, like myself, act not only as consultants, but also as teachers to the house staff and medical students, and as primary doctors within our own specialties."

What all this means to the patient at Jewish Hospital is that he has the expertise of not only his own physician, but consulting specialists as well as capable house staff physicians who are familiar with his case and are available day and night should he need professional services.
New Psychiatry Biofeedback Clinic Treats Headache

A new Biofeedback Clinic has been opened at Jewish Hospital, according to Dr. Nathan Simon, director of the Department of Psychiatry. The clinic, directed by Dr. Kenneth L. Russ, assistant director of psychology training, will treat patients with migraine and tension headache, and other functionally based neuromuscular disorders. Funds for purchasing equipment necessary to establish the clinic have been made available by the Deer Creek Foundation, which has generously supported programs in the Psychiatry Department in the past.

Biofeedback treatment has shown particular promise with respect to treatment of these specific types of headaches as well as in treatment of certain functional neuromuscular disorders, according to Dr. Russ. A variety of other stress-related disorders have also been approached via biofeedback techniques. It involves specialized training, sensory monitoring of the physiological system involved in the patient's disorder and appropriate feedback to the patient.

Dr. Russ, a member of the Biofeedback Research Society, has been actively involved in treatment, research and training in this area for the past five years and has been principal investigator of the Essential Hypertension Biofeedback Project at the Hospital.

Prior to acceptance of the treatment, patients must undergo medical evaluation to determine that their headaches are of the tension or migraine variety. Treatment itself consists of weekly outpatient training sessions for a period of time generally not more than three months. Interested persons may call the Department of Psychiatry at the Hospital for further information.

Dr. Thomas H. Budzynski, world renowned authority on biofeedback research, visited the Hospital's Department of Psychiatry in September as a consultant for the newly established program.

Dr. Budzynski, who is president of the Biofeedback Research Society and assistant professor of clinical psychology, University of Colorado Medical School, also spoke at the Department of Psychiatry Grand Rounds on "Biofeedback Treatment of Headache: Research and Clinical Approaches."

In his talk, Dr. Budzynski detailed the manner in which physiological monitoring and sensory feedback of muscle tension have been used for patients with tension headaches, and monitoring and feedback of peripheral body temperature for patients with migraine headaches.

Carbon Monoxide Levels Higher In Blood Donated by Smokers

Blood donated by heavy cigarette smokers may be dangerous if transfused to persons with certain ailments, such as coronary artery disease, it was suggested by Dr. Gustave L. Davis, acting pathologist-in-chief at Jewish Hospital, and Dr. George E. Gartner of the Department of Pathology, St. Louis University School of Medicine.

Drs. Davis and Gantner coauthored a report on carbon monoxide levels in volunteer blood donors which appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Smoking contributes to high carbon monoxide levels in the blood which retard the blood's ability to carry oxygen. This factor would be prominent in open heart surgery where large amounts of blood are needed.

"Generally nothing would happen in the average patient receiving blood with a high carbon monoxide level (about three per cent), but in the susceptible patient, specifically those with coronary artery disease, there might be a significant effect," said Dr. Davis. "The recipient would not have the benefit of the entire oxygen-carrying capacity of transfused blood," they reported.

The researchers noted a marked increase in carbon monoxide in smokers' blood after analyzing 16,649 pints of blood from the Missouri-Illinois Red Cross Volunteer Blood Program. In the blood, carbon monoxide combines with the red blood cells to form carboxyhemoglobin (COHb). Formation of COHb decreases the affected red cells' capacity to transport oxygen.

"Those who had smoked the day of donation constituted 39.2 per cent of the donor population and had a mean saturation of 4.58 per cent, while nonsmokers had a mean saturation of 0.85 per cent," Drs. Davis and Gantner wrote. Seventeen per cent of the donors studied had carboxyhemoglobin concentrations of greater than five per cent.

The pathologists do not suggest that cigarette smokers stop giving blood, but do suggest that they stop smoking before giving blood to reduce the mean blood carbon monoxide concentration.
Echocardiography: Diagnosing the Sounds of the Heart

Heart disease, still the country’s number one killer, accounts for the deaths of over one million Americans each year -- 51 per cent of the total annual deaths in the United States. In fact, cardiovascular diseases kill more people than all other causes of death combined, including cancer and automobile accidents.

And what might be most alarming and significant, heart disease appears suddenly, without advance warning.

Though today’s sophisticated diagnostic and monitoring equipment, special coronary care areas and specially trained nurses, physicians and cardiologists have drastically improved the care of heart attack victims, a means of early detection for this preventable but incurable and irreversible disease is still sought.

At Jewish Hospital, specialists are working toward what they believe to be the key -- prevention through early diagnosis and treatment.

Of the many diagnostic testing facilities available at Jewish Hospital for early diagnosis of heart disease, echocardiography offers one of the newest and perhaps one of the most effective and sensitive means, according to Dr. Robert Kleiger, cardiologist and director of the Hospital’s Heart Station.

Echocardiography borrows from the sonar techniques (ultrasound) used by the Navy during World War II. In echocardiography, a transducer placed on the chest sends out high frequency ultrasound beams which travel through the chest wall and heart at 3.5 million cycles per second. The sound beams bounce off the structures of the heart (wall, valves, etc.), and travel back to the transducer where they are converted to electrical signals which appear on an oscilloscope. The “echoes” are, at that time, recorded on paper as a permanent record. Recorded electrical impulses allow the physician to see the troubled area and record abnormalities of valves, increases in chamber size or abnormal motion of the heart wall.

Of particular interest, Dr. Kleiger points out that “we can move the transducer over the chest and thereby direct the sound beam to hit the specific structure of the heart that interests us. We can see the characteristics of the various structures, evaluate how they are functioning and thereby determine the abnormality.”

Echocardiography supplements the more familiar cardiac catheterization procedure which allows physicians to conclusively diagnose heart disease. (Cardiac catheterization is a procedure in which the physician inserts a thin, flexible catheter into a blood vessel to the chambers of the heart using a chest x-ray as a guide to study heart deficiencies.)

Echocardiography is a noninvasive technique which poses no risk to the patient and is considerably less costly than cardiac catheterization. The echocardiograph is usually taken first, and according to Dr. Kleiger, can examine many parts difficult to examine through cardiac catheterization. For example, the echocardiogram is one of the best ways to “see” septal motion.

The use of this sensitive diagnostic procedure marks a significant advance in the quest for early detection of heart disease. Echocardiography combined with all the other sophisticated resources available at Jewish Hospital offer the full spectrum of care vital to the needs of the heart patient while the search continues for the ultimate detection device which will enable us to conquer the illusive killer known as heart disease.

Grant for Leukemia Research

The National Cancer Institute has awarded $416,737 for leukemia research to a group of 11 scientists at Washington University School of Medicine. Gerald Medoff, M.D., associate professor of medicine and assistant professor of microbiology, is the principal investigator of the three-year study, “Curing of Leukemic Mice with Amphotericin B and BCNU.”

Though amphotericin B has been used for many years to treat fungal infections, the group at Washington University was the first to show it also could be used to treat leukemia. BCNU is an established drug used to treat cancer, but its antitumor effects appear to be enhanced by amphotericin B.

The grant will finance studies on the effects and the mechanism of these drugs on leukemia.

The other scientists who make up the group have a variety of research and clinical interests. They are: Ralph Graff, M.D., assistant professor of clinical surgery and of microbiology, an authority on the genetics of mice who is in charge of supplying the group with inbred mouse strains. Dr. Graff will work with J. Russell Little Jr., M.D., acting physician-in-chief at Jewish Hospital and professor of medicine and associate professor of microbiology, and Richard Lynch, M.D., assistant professor of pathology, to study the effects of amphotericin B on the cells and organs which control resistance to infection and cancer.

Cary A. Presant, M.D., assistant professor of medicine, has been testing new chemotherapeutic agents, including amphotericin B and BCNU on adult cancer patients.

Teresa J. Vietti, M.D., professor of pediatrics and associate professor of pediatrics and radiology, also will conduct clinical trials of amphotericin B combinations in the treatment of human leukemia, mainly in children.

David Schlessinger, Ph.D., professor of microbiology, will study the binding of amphotericin B to cell membranes to determine how the drug works on normal cells and those with leukemia.

Frederick A. Valeriote, Ph.D., associate professor of cancer in radiology, is developing a variety of cellular assays for normal and tumor cells in culture and in whole animals. The assays are of value in testing the effectiveness of antitumor drugs, including amphotericin B and BCNU, against animal tumors.

This interdisciplinary group will be able to answer questions about the clinical use of amphotericin B in patients, and also resolve some fundamental problems concerned with the cell biology and immunology of cancer cells.

He was formerly chairman of the Anesthesiology Department, Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, Virginia. Dr. Collins, a native of Hannibal, Missouri, is a graduate of the University of Missouri and the University of Missouri School of Medicine. He served his internship and residency at Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Maryland.
Workshop Teaches Area Nurses Ostomy Care

As part of its ongoing Ostomy Care Program, Jewish Hospital is sponsoring an education project on the care of ostomy patients. (An ostomy is an artificial opening of the intestinal or urinary tract through the abdominal wall as a result of radical surgery for a number of different disease processes. It takes the form of a colostomy, an ileostomy or an ileal conduit.)

Due to the shortage of enterostomal therapists (persons specially trained to care for ostomates), Jewish Hospital organized a week-long, in-depth teaching program to help professionals in area hospitals in caring for their ostomy patients.

An $18,000 award from the Bi-State Regional Medical Program has enabled Jewish Hospital to sponsor this unique education project in conjunction with the area's first Enterostomal Care Center established at Jewish Hospital in 1973.

Area hospitals were invited to select a candidate interested in attending the first of five workshops which was held in November. Since bedside training is essential, the course was limited to four nurses - Selma Millman, R.N., Veterans Administration Hospital; Sarah Govero, LPN, Jefferson Memorial Hospital; Yvonne C. O'Connor, R.N., Lutheran Medical Center and Genie Robben, Clinical Nurse, St. Louis University Hospitals. Dr. Thomas Covey, director of the Hospital’s Enterostomal Care Center and director of general surgery, headed the workshop with the help of co-coordinators Elsie Null, R.N., and Elnore Sturm, LPN, both enterostomal therapists.

The intensive, five-day course, which dealt with total care of the ostomate, included comprehensive sessions on the care of colostomies, ileostomies, urinary diversions and various gastrointestinal fistulas. The anatomy and physiology of the G.I. tract, conditions leading to ostomies, urinary diversions, types of surgical procedures, selection of stoma sites, skin problems, social and psychological problems and diet of the ostomate were discussed. Surgeons, a gastroenterologist, a urologist, a psychiatrist, a social worker and a registered pharmacist all headed sessions on the various aspects of ostomy care.

The trainees had clinical sessions on patient care during rounds with Jewish Hospital’s two enterostomal therapists and Joann Tonn, R.N., E.T., of Barnes Hospital. In addition, Arlene Klosterman, R.N., Children’s Hospital, discussed care as related to children and Phyllis Bonham, R.N., E.T., Visiting Nurse Association, reviewed the importance of home care.

The workshop also included a visit to one of the largest ostomy supply centers in the Midwest, Medical West Pharmacy. At week’s end, participants received certificates for 3.5 continuing education units. The second workshop is scheduled for December.

Through this program, Jewish Hospital’s ostomy care team plans to help trainees develop inservice ostomy training programs for their own hospitals, is prepared to present a three-hour inservice training program session with the trainee at her hospital and will be available for phone consultation with area hospitals.

LPN's Offered New Program

The Jewish Hospital School of Nursing has instituted a new admissions policy for LPN's which would enable an LPN to enter the nursing school program at the beginning of the second level and complete 18 months in lieu of the regular 27-month course.

In addition to meeting the admission criteria, an LPN must have had at least one year’s experience. She must have completed the basic college courses and passed the National League for Nursing tests in “Basics in Nursing,” and she must have given eight hours of patient care under the supervision of a first-level instructor. More detailed information may be obtained by contacting the School of Nursing.
Associates Present Discussion on Advances in Cancer Treatment

Following a buffet dinner, a panel of five physicians provided an informative session on "Horizons in Cancer Treatment" for members of the Associates of Jewish Hospital who attended the December 4 meeting.

Dr. Norman Orgel, Associates president, served as moderator. Participants included Dr. Nathan Berger, researcher; Dr. John Meyer, pathologist; Dr. Hyman Senturia, radiologist; Dr. Ralph Graff, surgeon and immunotherapist, and Dr. J. Lester Zeffren, medical oncologist.

Dr. Berger initiated the program by explaining Jewish Hospital's multimodality approach to the treatment of cancer through which physicians and researchers work together to combine all forms of therapy including surgery, chemotherapy, radiotherapy and immunotherapy.

Dr. Senturia discussed radiation and its relation to the treatment of clinical cancer and stressed the importance of cooperation among the radiation therapist, the surgical pathologist and the radiation physicist as well as the medical oncologist and immunotherapist in the development of this multidisciplinary approach to the cancer problem.

Dr. Meyer talked about the classification of tumors in the pathology area and Dr. Graff discussed the newest form of cancer treatment, immunotherapy. Dr. Graff suggests that "if we can build up defenses, then we can possibly slow or reverse the cancer. Surgery, radiotherapy and chemotherapy are all directed at destroying the enemy while immunotherapy is directed at strengthening the host defenses."

Dr. Zeffren stressed the importance of being honest with the patient. "Within the medical community there exists the expertise to give hope and medical treatment as sophisticated as is used in most institutes throughout the country,” Dr. Zeffren concluded.

A question-and-answer period followed the presentation.

This activity was one of many with which the Associates are currently involved for the benefit of its members.

In an effort to keep Associates members thoroughly informed and up-to-date on Hospital and Associates activities, the group has initiated News Capsule. News Capsule is an information sheet which contains newsy tidbits of recent advancements in medicine, Associates news and future plans, and news about developments at the Hospital, with contributing articles by staff physicians. The paper will be mailed to Associates members on a regular basis.

A new Speakers Bureau pamphlet has been published. Through this Associates service, physicians, administrators, paramedical specialists and directors are available to speak to community organizations about a wide range of health care and medical topics. This successful program has begun its fifth year. For further information, contact the Associates secretary at the Hospital.

The Associates board will be expanded from 21 to 30 in order to have more community members actively involved in the Associates’ activities. These members will be appointed by the president.

For a look into the Associates future, members will be offered a two-week, all-inclusive Scandinavian tour in August sponsored by the Associates through Intrav, Inc. The first-class accommodations come with a special group rate and guaranteed departures. More news about the Scandinavian sojourn will be forthcoming in future News Capsules.
Hospital Hosts Presidents of Jewish Organizations

"Jewish Hospital still serves the same basic purpose as when it was founded in 1900 -- to provide medical and dental services and to give physicians a place to practice and train. Only today, new knowledge and needs find us expanding our role as a community health center," said Lee Liberman, Hospital chairman, as he addressed about 100 guests active within the St. Louis Jewish community.

The biennial Presidents' Dinner, for presidents of all Jewish organizations in the area, gives the Hospital an opportunity to inform community leaders about recent developments and future plans for Jewish Hospital.

Following dinner, Liberman summarized the Hospital's Expansion Program for Excellence in Health Care, citing the completion of the garage and the Shoenberg Pavilion, and the current renovation of the main building.

In addressing the subject of the "Jewishness" of Jewish Hospital, Liberman explained that "through Jewish Hospital the Jewish community provides a place for excellence in health care for the community at large. Approximately 30 per cent of our patients are Jewish. We observe all holidays and the Sabbath with services conducted by the Jewish Federation Community Chaplain, Rabbi Lawrence Siegel, in the chapel. We have a kosher kitchen which serves more than 41,000 special and regular diet meals a year.

"Our Shalom Program provides volunteers who converse in Yiddish with our patients. We maintain a medical program with the Jewish Center for Aged, and we are a constituent of the Jewish Federation. Last year, we gave $1.3 million in free care, more than any other hospital in St. Louis."

In discussing why Jewish Hospital has remained at its present location, Liberman cited the Hospital's continuous pursuit of "dedication to excellence through our affiliation with Washington University Medical School, a major medical center for research, education and patient care."

Liberman introduced David Gee, Hospital president, who presented a guided tour of Jewish Hospital programs through a slide presentation to illuminate the make-up of Jewish Hospital. Gee noted that the Hospital has 334 private attending physicians and a full-time staff of 50, supplemented by a house staff of 114 who provide 24-hour medical coverage to patients.

An audience participation period followed as members of the community were invited to question the speakers.
New Surgical Suite in Operation

As of Monday, November 11, the new operating suite occupying the entire third floor of the Sydney M. Shoenberg Pavilion was officially "operating." But the move from the old O.R. into the new O.R. didn't just happen. It was a team effort of all operating room personnel (plus professional movers) who spent the majority of their weekend November 8 away from the comfort of their own homes and in the midst of the disarray which accompanies any move and especially a technical one. All this under sterile conditions as well, with caps, masks -- complete operating room attire.

It all began around 1 p.m. Friday, November 8. Operating room personnel started moving small equipment and supplies. Professional movers began packing supplies, moving operating room tables and transporting equipment down to Central Supply for sterilization. Cystoscopy tables had to be disconnected and reconnected in the new suite; a monitoring system had to be connected to the existing monitors in the new open heart room; all electrical plugs had to be changed to fit the new electrical outlets, among countless other essential details which needed attending, like suction outlets, gas sterilizer, exomatic units, readaption of anesthesia machines. The majority of the moving process was completed by 9 p.m. About 10:15 p.m. a major emergency orthopedic case was the last to be performed in the old operating rooms.

The O.R. crew began their Saturday morning at 7 a.m. as they started to unpack equipment and supplies in the new O.R. and put everything in its proper place. They began recleaning the sterile workroom and all operating rooms, a process that took five to ten workers cleaning for about ten hours throughout the day. By 7 p.m. Saturday almost all equipment and supplies were in place in the operating rooms. Anesthesia personnel continued to prepare their workroom and office which were ready for operating schedule by Saturday night, 9:30 p.m.

The operating room crew moved an entire operation into the new facility, progressing on schedule, while remaining ready for emergency surgery under continued sterile conditions. Before the official opening of the surgery suite Monday, November 11, that same crew had performed eight emergency cases in both the old and the new suites.

Sunday, Central Supply and O.R. supply people worked together all day arranging proper supply levels. Administrative details were completed. Crews worked until early evening finishing packs and instruments for the minor operating rooms, and 12 major and four minor operating rooms were ready for action Monday morning. Thirty-two cases were scheduled for day one.
Shalom Program Featured at American Health Congress

The Auxiliary’s Shalom Volunteer Program was selected as one of two case studies which were featured at one of the symposiums conducted at the annual meeting of the American Health Congress in Chicago in August.

At the session on “Culture and Ethnicity, Its Effect on Health Care,” Mrs. Norman Spetner represented the Hospital Auxiliary and presented a ten-minute paper on what the Shalom program is and how it functions.

Mrs. Spetner explained how the program came about, as a concentrated effort to reaffirm the “Jewishness” of Jewish Hospital. Through the Shalom program it was felt that Jewish Hospital could make our older patients feel more at home and comfortable and perhaps less apprehensive with this new understanding through communicating in Yiddish.

“A Shalom volunteer visits older adults, about ten to 15 each day, leaving a brochure printed in Yiddish and English which lists all the services available in the Hospital,” she explained to the group. Volunteers also distribute a daily Yiddish newspaper and will deliver Sabbath lights to those who request them.

“We are now involved in helping a group of new immigrants from Russia who all speak Yiddish though they know nothing of Judaism. They are being cared for at the medical and dental clinics at our Hospital and a Shalom volunteer is notified as to the time of the appointment in order to be on hand to help the staff and doctors.”

“We hope that the Jewish Hospital of St. Louis meets the needs of its own people and those of the community while maintaining its religious role,” said Mrs. Spetner. “We are striving to make the Jewish patients feel their cultural and ethnic background in an institution of highest quality of health care. We hope that every patient can really feel ‘at home.’ As a Jewish hospital we are making every effort to stress Judaic values and emphasize the Jewish ‘soul’ that this institution symbolizes,” she concluded.

In Memoriam

Dr. Arthur E. Strauss, formerly chief of medicine and president of the medical staff at Jewish Hospital, died Wednesday, October 9, at the age of 84.

Dr. Strauss practiced medicine for more than 50 years in his native St. Louis and remained active on the Jewish Hospital staff and at Washington University. He was graduated from Harvard College cum laude in 1912 and received his medical degree cum laude from Harvard Medical School in 1917. He interned at Massachusetts General Hospital and served his residency in cardiology at St. Francis Hospital in Pittsburgh. Dr. Strauss was also the R.B. Mellon Fellow in internal medicine at the University of Pittsburgh, 1916-1917.

During World War I, Dr. Strauss volunteered for the Army and was stationed in New York at the Rockefeller Institute on the cardiovascular service. He was later sent to England attached to the British Army and was reassigned to the cardiovascular service of the United States Army in France until the war ended.

He joined the Jewish Hospital staff in 1919 where he served as secretary of the medical staff, director of ward medical services, head of the clinic, president of the medical staff, physician-in-charge of the heart station, and chairman of the clinic staff. He was director of the Department of Medicine from 1948 to 1953.

Dr. Strauss was among a group of physicians who gathered in 1922 to work for the founding of an American Heart Association and he served as president of the St. Louis Heart Society twice.

At Washington University Medical School, Dr. Strauss served as director of the medical clinic, director of the cardiac clinic and assistant professor of clinical medicine.

At the time of his death, he was an assistant professor of clinical medicine emeritus at Washington University and had the special distinction of serving as consultant in cardiology and medicine at Jewish Hospital.

Because of his sustained interest in heart disease and Jewish Hospital, friends, patients and colleagues of Dr. Strauss decided to honor him by establishing the first named visiting professorship at Jewish Hospital. The Arthur E. Strauss Visiting Professor Fund was set up in 1959 with the express purpose of bringing to Jewish Hospital distinguished clinicians in cardiology to lecture and work with the staff in rounds and conferences. To date, 15 clinical scholars in cardiology have been invited to Jewish Hospital to lecture as Strauss professors.

Hospital Issues

Visitor Passes

A visitor pass system was initiated at the Hospital on Monday, November 11, in an effort to identify and control the number of visitors on nursing divisions. All visitors are now required to obtain a pass in order to visit patient floors. The passes, which indicate the date and room number of the patient to be visited, are limited to two (2) per patient at any one time.

These color-keyed passes are issued daily at the information desk in the main lobby of the Shoenberg Pavilion only during regular visiting hours, noon until 8:30 p.m. Passes are not issued before noon and are not issued to children under 14, who are not permitted on patient floors at any time. Persons without validated passes will not be allowed on patient floors and may be asked to leave by nursing or security personnel.

Improper visiting is a source of concern from the standpoint of infection control, disruption of personnel and housekeeping, noise level, security and disturbance to patients. In order to insure the effectiveness of this program, we ask the support of the community in respecting these regulations for the benefit of all patients at Jewish Hospital.
Auxiliary Hosts
Petite Lunch, Mini Tours

Understandably proud of their outstanding contribution to the progress and expanded health care services at Jewish Hospital, the Hospital Auxiliary decided to show off the results of much of their effort -- specifically the new Sydney M. Shoenberg Pavilion. So they organized a complimentary petite luncheon, made arrangements for tours of the new facility and invited the entire membership.

The tours began around 11 a.m. Wednesday, November 13, as small groups convened in the main lobby. The mini-tour included the Gift Gallery and Clover Garden, admitting and the business offices on the first floor; the not-quite-completed radiology suite on the second floor and a glimpse of one of the patient floors. Since all patient rooms are occupied on the three new floors, tours could not be taken onto patient floors. Guests were also unable to tour the surgery suite on the third floor which is a sterile area except for the family waiting room.

Luncheon followed in the Brown Group dining room where tables were abundantly supplied with petite sandwiches and desserts prepared by the Auxiliary board.

The American Cancer Society provided an exhibit and supplied literature on self-examination for breast cancer. The procedure was illustrated with a life-like model and an expert was on hand to answer questions.

Approximately 300 members attended the affair.
Ben A’Kibas,
N.R. Society
Hospital Guests

For their outstanding contributions and continued support of Jewish Hospital, members of the Ben A’Kiba Aid Society and the Noshim Rachmonioth Mothers’ and Babies’ Welfare Society were invited guests of the Hospital on two separate occasions in October for dessert teas and tours of the new facilities in the Sydney M. Shoenberg Pavilion.

Following dessert tea in the Brown Group dining room, Hospital officials conducted tours of the Pavilion as well as the areas of specific interest to each group.

The Ben A’Kiba Aid Society has long been a great benefactor of the Department of Rehabilitation Medicine. Their latest gift of $9,000 was made to refurbish and equip the Ben A’Kiba Therapeutic Gymnasium. The group initiated and continues to support the Ben A’Kiba Recreation Center where numerous activities provide rehabilitation patients with a recreational therapy area complete with television, stereo, movie projector, portable pool table and Ping Pong table, all donated by Ben A’Kiba.

The N.R. Mothers’ and Babies’ Welfare Society most recently pledged $10,000 to the Hospital’s Expansion Fund to help provide a new warm room for the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology. In the past, they have been ardent supporters of the obstetrical area and actively encourage new avenues of research in obstetrical medicine through continued enthusiastic support of the Frances B. Israel Research Fund which they established in 1947.

Rabbi Lawrence Siegel, D.Min., officiates at the candle lighting ceremony for patients and guests the first night of Chanukah at the Hospital. At left is Lee Liberman, chairman of the board of Jewish Hospital. This year, the menorah was placed in the new main lobby of the Sydney M. Shoenberg Pavilion.

Dr. Franz U. Steinberg, director of the Department of Rehabilitation Medicine, demonstrates some of the capabilities of the latest gift to his department from the Miriam Foundation. With him are Mrs. Earl Fishgall, president of Miriam Lodge No. 17, U.O.T.S., and Mrs. David Frank, vice president and liaison between Miriam Lodge and the Rehabilitation Department. The gift is a videotape unit which consists of camera, tape recorder, television and stand. It is used in patient evaluation, enabling the patients to see for themselves how they are progressing over a period of time, and is invaluable in pointing out specific difficulties a patient may be having. It is also used for inservice training for the rehabilitation staff and other Hospital staff.
Nursing, Pharmacy Host Drug Fair

If attendance is any indication of success, then Nursing Inservice and the Pharmacy can take credit for a tremendously successful Drug Fair which the two areas jointly sponsored Wednesday, November 6, at the Hospital.

The day-long event was held in the spacious quarters of the Brown Group dining room where 30 drug companies had informative displays set up for everyone’s information. Company representatives distributed printed materials about many of the drugs used at the Hospital and remained at their displays to answer any questions.

Word spread throughout the Hospital as employees, residents, students, physicians and nurses filed through the rows of tables. Nursing counts 1,067 signatures in their guest book and estimates a larger percentage who did not sign in. Having run out of samples prior to the scheduled 5 p.m. closing time, weary drug company representatives folded what was left of their displays and concluded what had been an interesting and enlightening experience for all who attended.

Potpourri

Harold (Pat) Scheff Jr., has recently moved from assistant executive director to associate executive director of the Hospital with responsibilities which include food services, research committee, animal facilities, security, communications, ambulatory care (clinics, emergency room, employee health, observation unit) and parking. Scheff joined the Hospital in April 1971. He is a graduate of Colgate University and has his master’s degree in hospital administration from Washington University School of Medicine.

Mrs. Dolly Stafford, C.R.N.A. (Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetist), has been named surgery chief nurse anesthetist. She joined the Hospital staff in 1971 and was appointed assistant chief nurse anesthetist in May 1974. A graduate of North Central College, Mrs. Stafford received her nurse’s training at South Chicago Community Hospital and her anesthesia training at Southwest Missouri School of Anesthesia, Springfield. Previously, she has worked with hospitals, as a freelance anesthetist and under an anesthesiologist.

Susan Graves, R.N., B.S.N., M.A., has been named director of the Jewish Hospital School of Nursing with responsibilities for planning and directing the school’s educational program and support activities. She succeeds Lavera Ryder, who has been named dean of students.

A 1966 graduate of the University of Missouri, Ms. Graves served as head nurse at Missouri University Medical Center until 1968 when she joined the Jewish Hospital School of Nursing faculty as an instructor. She was subsequently appointed coordinator of second-level courses before taking a leave of absence to complete studies for her master’s degree in education, which she received in August 1974 from St. Louis University.

Ms. Graves is a former recipient of the Helen A. Salomon scholarship, awarded annually through the Department of Nursing to a graduate nurse for further education. She is a member of Sigma Theta Tau, nursing honorary society and Pi Lambda Theta, a women’s educational honorary society.

Kurt Corbin has been named director of employee relations. He was serving as acting director of employee relations. Corbin, who has a B.A. degree in psychology, is currently working on his master’s degree in business administration at St. Louis University.

Ninety-eight seniors will be graduated from the Hospital’s School of Nursing Sunday, January 12, at Temple Israel. Miss Betty Temples, R.N., will speak to the largest graduating class in the school’s history. Miss Temples, who is coordinator of the second-level courses, is the first instructor to be chosen by the graduating class as the main speaker.

Correction...

We inadvertently omitted the name of Mrs. Bertha Tobias Herman as sister of the late Dr. Norman Tobias in the obituary which appeared in the October issue of "216." Mrs. Herman lives in Miami Beach.

Emerts Donate Anniversary Gifts

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Emert established a $10,000 endowed Kidney Research Fund at The Jewish Hospital of St. Louis in 1973.

On December 8, the Emerts celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a party given in their honor by their five children, and the Mr. and Mrs. Ben Emert Kidney Research Fund at Jewish Hospital has been designated by them as a recipient of anniversary gifts from their many friends and relatives. The fund, which they gave in memory of their cousins, Nathan and Louis Kaskowitz, is used to support investigative activities relating to the cause and prevention of kidney disease. B'nai Amoona has also been designated as a recipient of anniversary gifts.

For many years, the Emerts have been active in the Jewish community, supporting among others, the Jewish Federation, the J.C.C.A. and the B'nai Amoona Synagogue. Mr. Emert is a Mason and a Shriner; Mrs. Emert is a member of Eastern Star, and both are long-time members of B'nai Brith.

The Emerts have been in the retail ready-to-wear business in St. Louis for 48 years. In addition to their five children -- Mrs. Philip Kootman, Mrs. Arthur Rudin, Floyd Emert, Mrs. Paul Seligsohn and Harvey Emert -- they have 19 grandchildren and three great grandchildren. In discussing their 50 years of married life, Mrs. Emert said, "We are very proud parents and are gratified to have such devoted children."
Contributions to Jewish Hospital Funds

Contributions received are used for research, appliances for clinic patients, new equipment and worthy undertakings, sponsored by the Jewish Hospital Auxiliary.

The following memorial and honorary contributions were received after August 15 through October 15. Any contributions received after October 15 will be listed in the next 216.

Contributions to this fund may be made by sending checks payable to The Jewish Hospital Tribute Fund, c/o Mrs. Norman W. Drey or Mrs. Harry W. Loeb, 216 South Kingshighway, P.O. Box 14109, St. Louis, Missouri 63178.
